Fear flooding, siltation

Residents: state should probe new Wolf Rd. basin

by LYNN ASINOF

A group of Wheeling residents is asking the state division of waterways to investigate a "retention basin" constructed by developers of the Town Square Apartments, on Wolf Road just south of Dundee Road.

The basin consists of a large square hole dug into the side of the Wheeling drainage ditch. There is no separation between the basin and the creek, and thus water is free to flow in and out of the basin.

Esther Davis, 15 E. Jeffrey Ave., said she and the other residents feel the basin has "grossly changed the contour of the drainage ditch at the rear of their property. We are concerned that these changes could cause erosion, flooding to the adjacent properties and displacement of silt," she said.

The residents have sent a letter to the division of waterways so that the state will begin looking into the matter. Mrs. Davis noted that the division of waterways has certain rules governing the way a watercourse can be altered. "We are questioning the division of waterways as to whether this type of work is permissible," she said.

STATE OFFICIALS, however, were unavailable for comment on the matter.

Mrs. Davis also said she is concerned that the village has spent many thousands of dollars in developing a comprehensive study on village flooding problems. She said a drastic change in the creek, such as the retention basin, might invalidate the stormwater and flood studies.

"We are concerned that they would spend so much money on these studies and then allow someone to do this," she said. "I am concerned that if they allow some of these builders to do this, it will set a precedent for other builders."

In addition, Mrs. Davis said such a retention basin is "literally digging out from under us" the plans for a proposed wildlife preserve along the creek banks. The village beautification committee is in the process of developing a plan that would preserve the creek beds as an open area.

VILLAGE MGR. George Passolt said he is not worried that the retention basin will cause problems with flooding and siltation. He said the village engineer has endorsed the basin as being sound water retention.

"According to Larry Oppenheimer, it's sound retention," he said. "In fact, we held them up for almost a year until he would build the kind of retention we wanted."

Passolt noted that the site does not technically require any retention since it is only 4.5 acres. He said the Lyke Realty Co., developers of the project, have been cooperative in meeting the village requests for retention.

The village manager said he was originally worried that the basin would change the flow of the creek and result in erosion and siltation. "But it's remaining stagnant," he said of the water in the retention basin. "It's not swirling around. I watched that purposely because I'm most concerned about that."

THE VILLAGE has received several complaints about the retention basin, including one from St. Joseph the Worker Church. Passolt, however, said that he has been able to satisfy those people once he explained the way the retention basin worked.

Passolt said he also did not feel the basin would affect the village's newly prepared stormwater and flooding report by changing the creek. "I don't think it's going to do anything to the creek," he said.

The retention basin had been a big help during the recent rainy weather, according to Passolt. "It did hold one heck of a lot of water," he said.

Egan quits fire, police panel; bound for Tucson

Peter Egan has submitted his resignation from the Wheeling Police and Fire Commission, and will be moving to Tucson, Ariz., in the next few weeks.

Egan, a former village trustee, said he was leaving Wheeling "for health reasons." He said he has been thinking of moving to Arizona since 1968 when he first learned that he had rheumatoid arthritis. "That's the reason I didn't run for the board last time," he said.

First elected to the village board in 1963, Egan served as trustee for eight years. He chose not to run for reelection in 1971, and later was appointed to serve on the village police and fire commission.

Egan said he has already sold his house, and is living with relatives until he and his family can move to Tucson. He said he has not yet made definite plans, other than leaving in the next few weeks.

WHEN ASKED if he had regrets about leaving Wheeling, Egan said "I've got lots of them. I've got a lot of ties here in Wheeling and a lot of friends here. But it's either that or end up a cripple."

Egan said he will leave the police and fire commission with a substantial amount of unfinished work. He said there are two experienced commission members who will be able to handle the job.

Village Pres. Ted C. Scanlon said yesterday Egan's departure from Wheeling

Peter Egan

"is going to be a tremendous loss to the village. It's going to be a big pair of shoes to fill," he said.

SCANLON praised Egan for being civic minded and a hard worker, and said the village benefited from his service both as a trustee and as a commission member.

The village president said the resignation came as a surprise, even though he knew Egan had been considering the move. "I knew it was coming in the future. But I didn't know when," he said.

With Egan's resignation, the village board will once again be interviewing applicants for a seat on the police and fire commission. Last week, the board filled the vacancies on all but three village commissions. So far, only one person, Michael Moran, has applied for the seat on the police and fire commission.

Pedestrian, 27, fair after auto accident

A Des Plaines man remained in fair condition yesterday in the intensive care unit of Holy Family Hospital, after he was struck by a car Sunday in Wheeling.

Samuel Salinas, 27, of 850 Oakton St., Des Plaines, was admitted to the hospital with a broken leg after he was hit in front of 780 W. Dundee Rd. by a car driven by Louis Ferrigno, 63, of Miami, Fla. The accident occurred at 8:40 p.m.

Ferrigno, who told police Salinas ran in front of his car, was charged with failure to exercise due care to avoid colliding with a pedestrian. Salinas was charged with failure to yield the right of way to a vehicle. Both will appear Oct. 23 in Arlington Heights branch of Cook County Circuit Court.

Hein votes 'aye' on auto parts purchase

The Wheeling Village Board last night awarded the purchase of an auto lift and alignment equipment to B. C. Auto Parts Inc., a Mundelein firm owned by the family of trustee William Hein. The vote was unanimous.

The board chose not to discuss a possible conflict of interest between the village purchases and Hein's position on the board. Hein, however, voted in favor of awarding the purchase to B.C. Auto Parts for a bid of $4,253.65.

Hein is employed by Wheeling Auto Parts Inc., 141 S. Milwaukee Ave., next lowest bidder for the purchase. Gordon P. Hein, the trustee's father, is the president of both auto part firms.

The Herald disclosed last week that village purchases from these firms may be violating a state law that prohibits officials from having any interest in purchases made by their municipalities.

In other business the board passed a resolution honoring the Wheeling High School marching band for placing first in a competition in Rock Falls, Ill., this past June. Members of the band were on hand to receive copies of the resolution.

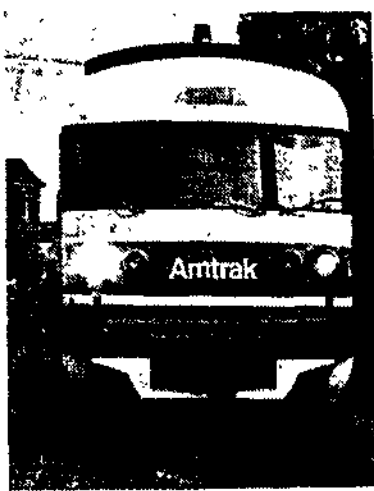

Trustee John Koeppe was absent from the meeting.

THE FRENCH-BUILT Amtrak Turbo-train comes in a 423-foot set, including turbine-powered engines at each end that operate simultaneously, pushing and pulling at the same time. Regular weekday runs from Chicago to Springfield and St. Louis mark the first use of the modern, 296-passenger trains.

Outmoded rails slow Turbo train to a crawl; it's a 5-hour trip to St. Louis COMBINED WITH upgraded track and operating procedures, this modern Turbo train may take over the short-run trips in the nation. Operating now from Chicago to St. Louis, its 125-mph capability is not being tested because the trains are limited to 79 mph by old regulations.

Train of future on tracks of past

by STEVE FORSYTH

They call it the train of the future, but putting the new Turbo train on the Chicago-St. Louis run is like a new suit on an old man — it looks and feels better but doesn't make him young.

"We are operating on an early 1900s plant with 21st century type of equipment," said Gene Glendinning, Amtrak district sales manager in Chicago.

The train itself — exciting and sleek — has to operate on outmoded rails under antique regulations. It can travel up to 125 miles per hour, but is limited to 79 m.p.h., the same as the old trains. It is slowed even more on bad stretches of track, and must yield to other trains frequently.

In the rail yards, speeds are 5 m.p.h. or less, adding several minutes to the travel time. It took half an hour on one trip last week to get from the Mississippi River crossing to the terminal in downtown St. Louis, creeping and halting all the way.

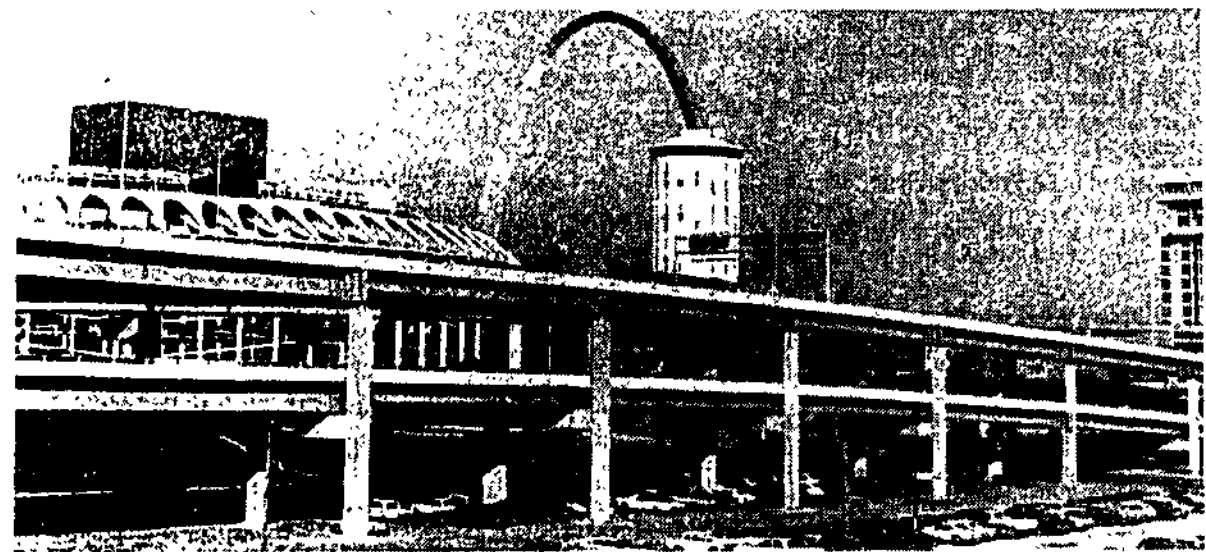

The delays are not necessarily the fault of Amtrak. Since the trains have to run on existing railroad routes, they are subject to the railroad rules and whims — in this case those of the Illinois Central & Gulf — and must comply with federal and state regulations.

THE TURBOTRAINS are given four hours and 50 minutes to make the Chicago-St. Louis run, but despite the fatherly fretting and tinkering of several Amtrak officials, it seems to take at least half an hour longer.

Despite the troublesome conditions along part of the route, Glendinning said Amtrak is working on improvements and alternatives that could greatly speed up the service. He said an alternate route is being tested that would take the trains more directly into St. Louis, avoiding part of the railroad freight yards that require slow speeds. Amtrak is also seeking a 90-m.p.h. limit on the existing track, which the experts feel is a safe speed. With the 4 m.p.h. leeway granted to trains, the Turbo train could operate up to 94 m.p.h. instead of the present 79 m.p.h. maximum.

With the higher speed and some other minor adjustments, Glendinning said the train could feasibly make the trip on a 4½-hour schedule, instead of the present five that stretches to 5½ hours because of delays.

The next step is to build a St. Louis Amtrak station as convenient and accessible as Chicago's Union Station, terminal for the north end of the Turbo train run. Glendinning said St. Louis' Union Station is a national landmark and thus can't be torn down or altered. Another rail terminal is planned in that city, with construction scheduled to begin in about a year.

THE PRESENT St. Louis station platform is rickety, with holes in the roof and rough sections where unused rails have been ripped out. Inside, the grandiose architecture of better days — stained-glass windows, elaborate balconies and ceiling adornment — looks down on empty corridors.

Other changes Amtrak will have to incorporate include:

- Closing off highway grade crossings or protecting them with gates.
- Installing microwave telephones for faster crew and train-to-control communications.
- Designating some tracks for passenger trains only to exclude freight trains that now slow down or stop the Turbo train periodically.

THE TURBOTRAIN is but a small part of the total Amtrak plan that is 2½ years old and striving to fill a gap in the nation's transportation system.

Glendinning said Amtrak hopes to become the primary transporter for short hauls. "We are best suited for trips under 500 miles, and we can make money at it," he said, because airlines are trying to get rid of short trips that aren't profitable. Another target of the rail system is the motorist who is clogging the nation's highways at an ever-increasing rate and wasting dwindling fuel supplies.

The Turbo train is the most modern tool at Amtrak's disposal, but is also providing many headaches. Beginning with the special boat that had to be redesigned to bring the French-built trains to America, there have been minor problems in adjustment to the rail system here.

SOME CHANGES had to be made to meet U.S. safety standards. Others involve changes in habits of railroadmen. The French trains have controls on the left, while almost all American systems have controls on the right, and the Turbo trains do not need a fireman in the cab, although rail unions demand one anyway.

Amtrak has been given the task of resurrecting the dying railroad passenger system that caused the Penn Central, for example, to rip out miles of Chicago-St. Louis track to save taxes (railroads are taxed at $4,000 a mile for right-of-way). The Penn Central track was parallel to the ICG, but when it was removed, it left a gap with only single track in the run and trains have to pull over and wait for each other.

While the Turbo train is getting its operation under control, Amtrak is continuing plans for other state-supported short runs radiating from Chicago. New routes planned for inauguration this month or next include trains (not Turbo trains) to Rockford, Freeport and Dubuque, Iowa, and a run to Champaign.

The Turbo train itself may be extended to Milwaukee. Amtrak originally made that commitment but couldn't follow through when one of its new units was wrecked in Montreal last July.

Turbo ride exciting, but plagued by delays

Sky-blue lapel buttons beckon, "Ride the Turbo!" as passengers climb aboard the futuristic train in Chicago's Union Station, bound for Springfield or St. Louis.

Riding the Supertrain begins with a feeling of excitement, an air of history being made. And in some small part, history is being made with the first turbine-powered train of this type in the United States.

Several passengers are on the train for that reason — to say they have ridden one of the most modern trains in the nation.

The seats and cars are modern, airy and cheerfully colored. All seats are coach and don't recline as much as some passengers would like, but they do slip back a little. One clue — don't pull on the metal handle on the armrest to make the seat go back. It's an ashtray. Just slide forward on the seat and you'll get the desired result.

ONCE THE TRAIN is rolling, two things become obvious — the train is quieter, and everyone stares at it. Old railroad men, yard workers, golfers, children, housewives, they all take a second or a third glance as the intruder from the future slips by the backyards of America.

To expect an airplane-like ride is asking too much. The train still rocks on the uneven rails, and the stops and starts come too often. But instead of staring at clouds, passengers are treated to pleasant country scenery, the state capital, a shack made from an old caboose, a deep rock quarry, and of course the Mississippi River and the St. Louis Gateway Arch. Occasional freight trains pass by in the other direction, and boxcars line the sidings bearing interesting names like Bogalusa, La.

The pleasant cars and the passing panorama make the trip fun, although one wonders how the train will ever break out of the red ink. Of the 296 seats, only about 50 to 100 are filled.

AS THE train squealing sound of the European horn filters back from the engine, passengers begin working their way to the center of the 423-foot train, where the cafeteria offers a change from traditional railroad fare.

A bank of stainless steel shelves offers several varieties of breakfast or lunch items, all sealed in plastic. A passenger takes a small cardboard box and begins selecting items, hopping the train hits a smoother stretch of track when it comes time for the waiter to pour the coffee.

A man at the cash register takes the plastic packets and places them in a microwave oven while he adds up the order. Passengers then select seats in the dining section, which has space for 24 at six small tables.

Back at your seat, you can see that small boys still wave at trains from backyard dirt piles, and motorists on the highway parallel to the tracks can't stop glancing at this unusual addition to the railroad family.

THE IDEA of driving almost 300 miles to St. Louis seems absurd after getting off the train. The strain on the eyes, the tired back from sitting so long without moving around — they don't happen on the train. Even better, you don't have to go through an irritating airport security system to get on or off the train.

The only thing that might bother a passenger is the fact that he is sitting in a modern conveyance capable of smooth, high-speed operation, and he is still rocked around a bit and made to wait on sidings while other trains speed by.

Every run seems to be delayed at least a half-hour, even though they start almost exactly on time. It appears an optimist or an efficiency expert set up the schedule. With a few minutes lost at each stop and a half-hour getting through the railroad yards in St. Louis, the Turbo train is obviously hampered and the schedule is impossible to keep.

ONE ALTON man taking the train to Chicago for a convention said he was trying it out as an alternate to flying, but was a little disappointed when the Turbo was a half-hour late into Alton. He suggested that Amtrak promote the Alton station, with connecting bus service, to eliminate the delay in the St. Louis railyard.

Israeli forces strike hard; both sides claiming gains

by United Press International
The Israeli war machine on full offensive drove the Syrian army off the Golan Heights on the northern front of the Middle East war Monday and began "the destruction of the Egyptian army" in the Sinai Desert to the south, the Israeli high command announced.

"We are now in the middle of the battle," said Lt. Gen. David Elazar, Israeli armed forces chief of staff. "We continue our counter-attack, we shall continue it tomorrow and we shall break and destroy completely all the attacking forces."

In the United Nations, Egypt reported the first Israeli aerial attack of the war against an Egyptian city — Port Said on the Mediterranean coast.

Egyptian Foreign Minister Mohammed Hassan El-Zayyat told the U.N. General Assembly of the attack on the ancient seaport at the northern end of the Suez Canal. Arab military communiques also reported the shelling of Port Said.

Arab communiques continued to sound a victorious note despite the Israeli offensive. Among other Arab claims was the capture of Qantara East on the East Bank of the Suez Canal.

On the third day of the renewed Middle East conflict, Elazar said Israel had destroyed "many hundreds of tanks" on both fronts in an all-out drive against the two Arab armies which invaded across the Golan Heights and the Suez Canal on Saturday, the Jewish Yom Kippur Day of Judgment.

Elazar said Israeli forces had "not yet" crossed the Suez Canal into Egypt. He would not say whether they intended to cross the canal, whether they had already crossed the Syrian border or if they intended to march on Cairo and Damascus.

But he said pointedly that "cease-fire lines are not marked on the terrain" and Israel would attack "wherever it is necessary."

"The troops are moving from our territories against the other side," he said. "We shall see in the next few days in what direction we shall go."

In Cairo, a communique reported Egyptian armed forces pushed their advance into the Sinai Desert east of the Suez Canal and recaptured the Israeli-occupied city of Qantara East, second largest city in Sinai.

Cairo Radio broadcast a communique Monday afternoon which said "many" clashes took place through the day with the Israelis finally forced to withdraw after "suffering heavy casualties in lives and equipment."

SYMBOL OF the troubled Mideast, this building along the Suez canal was shattered in the 1967 fighting and since then has housed a United Nations unit, trying to oversee the uneasy truce in a no-man's land. That effort continues to be in vain, with Arabs and Israelis through the third day of a new war and the UN called on again to try to find some kind of solution.

U.S. urges U.N. solution

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — The United States appealed Monday night to Israeli, Egyptian and Syrian armed forces to return to positions they held before war broke out in the Middle East to open the way for "a solution for the tense and cancerous situation confronting us."

"What we seek is not a war of words but a broad consensus which will enable the Council to put the full weight of its influence behind the task of restoring peace so that the Middle East can be set on a new course pointing toward a better era in the region," U.S. Ambassador John Scali told the U.N. Security Council.

Scali said Washington had made no judgment as to constructive action to try to end the fourth Middle East war and he offered no proposals.

Secretary General Kurt Waldheim informed the Council that Egypt requested evacuation of U.S. military observers from the Suez Canal zone to Cairo. The observers reported they could not confirm reports that Israeli forces crossed the Suez Canal at the start of hostilities on Saturday.

Scali said reports based on U.N. sources appeared to indicate that Syria started hostilities with air attacks in the Golan Heights and at the same time the first firing in the Suez front "was from west to east."

The Security Council meeting, called by the United States, was to begin at 2:30 p.m., but shortly before that time the 15-nation body's course of action still had to be discussed. The meeting was scheduled to begin at 5 p.m., while the non-aligned nations discussed possible resolutions.

The conflict was much in evidence at the U.N. in the morning, with Arab and Israeli spokesmen carrying their argument to the floor of the General Assembly.

They accused each other of starting the renewed warfare on Saturday, Syria's deputy foreign minister charging Israel with "cowardly aggression" and launching an attack so massive that "there is no doubt it was part of a premeditated plan," and Israel's foreign minister saying he received a telegram from Israel six hours before hostilities began saying an attack was coming from the Arabs.

War at-a-glance:

by United Press International

The Participants:

Israel is fighting against Egypt and Syria. Both Arab nations, along with Jordan, lost territory to Israel in the six-day Middle East war of June, 1967. Jordanian troops were not reported involved in the latest outbreak of fighting, although there were several air incidents.

The Battlefield:

Major fighting centers on two broad fronts, one to the southwest of Israel and the other to the northeast. The Egyptians and Israelis are fighting in the Sinai Peninsula, generally along the 102-mile-long Suez Canal, which runs from the Mediterranean Sea to the Gulf of Suez. The Israelis and Syrians are fighting for control of the Golan Heights, rough terrain overlooking several Israeli settlements in the north.

The Fighting:

Battles broke out on both fronts Saturday, with each side blaming the other for starting it. There were conflicting reports of successes, but both sides generally agreed that Egypt managed to pour hundreds of tanks and a large infantry force across the canal and Syria captured, at least temporarily, portions of the Golan Heights. The latest fighting, the third day of the war, appeared to center on whether the Arab countries would make further advances or be pushed back.

History of the Conflict:

This is the fourth Middle East war since Israel emerged as a state 25 years ago under a partition plan for Palestine ordered by the United Nations. The Israelis and the Arabs fought a year-long war in 1948 as the British mandate in Palestine came to an end, with the Israelis emerging with new territory under its control. When Egypt nationalized the Suez canal in 1956, Israel invaded the Sinai and captured new Egyptian territory and troops. Israel withdrew to its old borders when the U.N. sent a peace-keeping force into the Sinai. War broke out again in June, 1967 and Israel scored quick gains, particularly in the air. The war was over in six days, with Israel victorious and in control of the Sinai, the Golan Heights, Jordan's West Bank including all of Jerusalem. A U.S.-sponsored ceasefire went into effect in August, 1970. There have been several sporadic flare-ups in the interim.

Nixon asks Brezhnev aid

(From Herald news services)

President Nixon, who cut short a Key Biscayne vacation stay to concentrate on diplomatic efforts to end the Mideast War, personally contacted Soviet communist party leader Leonid Brezhnev to enlist his help.

Putting to the test a May summit meeting agreement committing their countries to avoiding situations that could lead to a direct confrontation, Nixon's overture to Brezhnev was made Sunday, and the President received a reply on his return to Washington shortly before midnight.

There was no indication of Brezhnev's response, but he said in Moscow — at a luncheon for Japanese Premier Tanaka — that the Soviet Union is ready to contribute to moves to bring peace to the Middle East.

Though he branded Israel the "aggressor," his remarks were seen as guarded, hinting at Soviet backing for efforts to achieve a cease-fire in the United Nations Security Council.

Nixon called in newsmen during a late morning meeting with Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, and said of the contact with Brezhnev, "We are developing support for a position which we hope and believe will be effective in stopping the fighting."

The exchange with Brezhnev, and several made by Kissinger with all parties to the conflict, are part of a broad diplomatic initiative to bring pressure on both sides to end the fighting and bring about a settlement of differences.

Justice Dept.: no 'leaks'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Justice Department denied Monday that it has engaged in "a campaign of news leaks" in the kickback allegations involving Vice President Spiro T. Agnew, but said it would allow its senior officials to respond to Agnew's subpoenas to answer questions.

In a 17-page memorandum personally handed to U.S. District Judge Walter E. Hoffman, the department said Agnew's lawyers could not support their charges that the department had engaged in such a campaign.

"They are engaged in an attempt to confuse the issues and to halt a legitimate investigation by the common defense tactic by trying the prosecutor," the memorandum said.

Agnew's lawyers had filed motions to halt the investigation by the special federal grand jury in Baltimore into charges that Agnew received kickbacks from contractors and architects when he was Baltimore County executive and Maryland governor. The grand jury is expected to begin its third week of hearing testimony today.

Agnew's lawyers charged there had been a "malicious campaign" of leaks that prejudiced the case against him. The lawyers also subpoenaed several reporters in an attempt to force them to answer questions about government sources for their leaks.

Earlier Monday, lawyers for the reporters filed a motion in U.S. District court in Baltimore to extend from Thursday to Oct. 18 the date which the reporters would be under order to appear in court with their stories and notes. If this motion were granted, it was believed the lawyers would file a motion by Monday to quash the subpoenas.

The department said it had made "vigorous efforts" to discover whether its personnel had leaked facts.

"But since the unsupported charges made by counsel for the vice president are serious, the department wishes to meet them head on and meet them now," it said.

'Spies' for Nixon campaign on committee agenda

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate Watergate committee resumes public hearings today by summoning two alleged spies for President Nixon's campaign organization.

The committee planned to hold hearings through Thursday and then recess for two weeks along with the Senate. A spokesman said the members hoped soon to conclude their inquiry into 1972 campaign "dirty tricks" and quickly turn their attention to campaign financing.

Sam Dash, the committee's chief counsel, said the first two witnesses to be called this week would be John "Fat Jack" Buckley and Michael W. McMinoway, code-named "Sedan Chair II."

The counsel refused to comment on reports that the panel had subpoenaed records of four hotels in Key Biscayne, Fla., as part of an investigation into an alleged $100,000 donation to the Nixon campaign by billionaire recluse Howard Hughes.

The Washington Post and the Los Angeles Times reported Sunday that the committee subpoenas sought the hotel registration dates of 19 persons, mostly Hughes associates, but also Nixon's friend, C. G. "Bebe" Rebozo; Nixon's brother, Donald, and Watergate conspirators E. Howard Hunt and G. Gordon Liddy.

Former Hughes aide Robert Mahew testified in a deposition in federal court in Los Angeles that his billionaire boss arranged to give $100,000 to the Nixon campaign in 1969 and 1970 through Rebozo, the newspapers said.

Buckley, a former government employee, has been identified by previous witnesses as a go-between who carried information to Hunt from a spy in the organization of 1972 Democratic presidential contender Edmund S. Muskie.

McMinoway allegedly spied on the Democratic campaign organization of Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey.

Curfew!

Suburban police vary in their enforcement of the law

by STIRLING MORITA

If you're under 18 and have an itch to go out for a night of carousing, it might be wise to steer clear of Hoffman Estates.

Hoffman Estates police boast strict enforcement of local and state curfew laws. Other area police departments vary in the type of enforcement on clamping down on curfew cutters.

In Arlington Heights, chances are you may get away with a walk in the moonlight as long as you're not involved in any nighttime no-nos.

Reasons for curfew enforcement range from youngster safety to curbing malicious, mischievous antics.

ALL THE local governments have curfew ordinances, but Hoffman Estates, Rolling Meadows, Des Plaines and Mount Prospect appear to be the only departments that almost solely rely on local law. However, authorities have maintained it is still the officer's discretion to decide whether to enforce the state or local law.

State statute requires that a youngster under 18 must not be in a public place or on a street unless accompanied by a parent or guardian after 11 p.m. weekdays and midnight on Fridays and Saturdays. Penalties can be fines up to $100. Curfew is lifted officially at 6 a.m. Hoffman Estates, Palatine, Wheeling and Mount Prospect ordinances follow the state fines.

Ordinances in Elk Grove Village, Rolling Meadows, Des Plaines and Buffalo Grove call for 10:30 p.m. weekdays and midnight Fridays and Saturdays. Schaumburg's ordinance is a half hour earlier in both restrictions.

PUNISHMENT can range from a $10 fine to station adjustment to drastic juvenile court action. Station adjustment is when the offender is required to meet with a youth officer for a certain period of time.

Illinois State police catch most of their late law violators behind the wheel of a car. After curfew, driver's licenses for those under 18 are no longer valid, and a youngster caught after hours could be charged with driving without a driver's license.

Lt. Bill Freund of Hoffman Estates police said, "They (youngsters) may go to

"WHERE ARE YOU GOING?" is the common query area policemen have for those under 18 who venture out after curfew hours. Depending upon other towns. They know they can't get away with it in Hoffman Estates.

"We enforce it rigidly in an effort to combat vandalism and malicious mischief. Not all kids are bad, but unfortunately there is no way to define one from the other."

what he is doing or how long after curfew he is stopped, the youth will get either a ride home or to the local police station.

IF A WAYWARD youth is picked up in Hoffman Estates, he is brought into the station, and his parents notified. In most cases, a citation is issued. A $10 fine is levied. Further repeats could result in sessions with the juvenile officer or juvenile court action.

Most late-nighters are found at places of activity — parks, schools, restaurants, shopping centers and drive-ins. Sixteen and 17-year-olds are the most common violators, but persons as young as 10 or 11 are also found on the streets.

Action on curfew violators depends upon the patrol officer's judgment — which is based on where the youngster has been, where he is going, what he was doing when he was stopped and how long after curfew. A teen returning from work has a valid excuse. Enforcement is often based on the number of police calls and emergencies in a given night.

ARLINGTON HEIGHTS Police Chief L. W. Calderwood said there is no curfew problem in the village.

"We use curfew as a reason to bring someone in if he is doing something else mischievous," Calderwood said. "If you're minding your own business, we're not going to bother you."

Mel Mack, youth officer for Elk Grove Village, said really effective curfew coverage is not used unless there is a rash of property-damage crimes. "It all depends on what the officer sees on the street. There may be more things involved," he added.

A $15 fine is usually slapped on a first time offender in Mount Prospect.

"If it's just 15 or 20 minutes past curfew, the officer might give them a ride home," said Sgt. Ralph Doney of the Mount Prospect Police Department.

He noted that in the summer of 1972 a rash of nighttime vandalism occurred. A special squad of about 10 men patrolled the village from 10 p.m. to 2 a.m. to enforce curfew, and property damage decreased, he said.

CHUCK WEIDNER, youth officer for the Buffalo Grove Police Department, said, "We give a little leeway. Everyone's entitled to be a little late sometimes."

He added that it is mostly the state law that is enforced and that most of the offenders caught are from out of town.

Des Plaines police generally enforce their city curfew, and fines average about $25. Station adjustment is used. However, Sgt. Ken Fredericks of the Des Plaines Police Department said, "It's pretty well cleared out by then. About the only time we have curfew violators is when there is a school dance and the kids didn't get home in time."

PALATINE police pattern their enforcement after the state statute. "Their (youngsters') youthfulness sometimes gets them into trouble," said Sgt. Gordon Mosby of the Palatine Police Department.

In Wheeling, where the village ordinance is the same as the state, first-timers are the ones usually found out after curfew. Sgt. Bill Ralston of the Wheeling Police Department explained that 16- and 17-year-olds are the most common curfew violators because of their mobility and extended freedom.

Rolling Meadows Police Chief Lewis Case said a citation is issued to the offender and that he must have his parents sign it and turn it in. The second time, a youth can be fined up to $25.

"In most instances, they're walking home just a little late," the police chief

Panel to screen nominees for state board of education

Nominees for the new state board of education will be screened by a special committee established by Gov. Daniel Walker.

Walker has announced the appointment of an 11-person committee headed by Robert E. Brooker, a member of the board of trustees of the University of Chicago. The committee will recommend 50 persons to the governor, who will then appoint the 17-member state board.

Several Northwest suburban residents are in the running for appointment to the state board, including John Haas of Prospect Heights and Jerry Crise, a member of the Wheeling-Elmhurst-Grove Dist. 21 board. Haas has been recommended by State Rep. Eugenia Chapman, D-Arlington Heights.

The 17-member board will take over the role of Illinois school superintendent beginning in 1975. Once members are named by the governor, the board will have to hire a superintendent who will replace the present elected state superintendent.

Eight members of the state board will be from Cook County, eight from downstate and one member will be appointed from the state at-large.

BESIDES BROOKER, members of the screening committee are Warren Bacon, former member of the Chicago board of education; Dorothy Benner, president of the Illinois Congress of Parents and Teachers; Edward Curtis Jr., president of the First Bank and Trust Co. of Mount Vernon; Erving Dilliard, former editor of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch; Wesley Hardin, an official of the United Auto Workers Union in Rock Island; Vivian Hickey, a member of the board of higher education; Alice Ilrig, trustee of the village of Oak Lawn and former president of the Illinois League of Women Voters; Joseph Pisciotta, associate professor of state government at the University of Illinois; Richard Stone, Springfield farmer and member of the Pleasant Plains Board of Education, and Shirley Sadov, a Peoria housewife.

A spokesman for the governor's office said all nominations and applications for the state board received by the governor will be forwarded to the screening committee.

Fourth district candidate

State Rep. Schlickman tells plans to seek sixth term

by AL MESSERSCHMIDT
State Rep. Eugene Schlickman will run again.

Schlickman, R-Arlington Heights, announced yesterday he will seek a sixth term to "work for an open, truly representative house . . . to continue to speak out where others hesitate."

The Arlington Heights attorney was optimistic in his fourth district candidacy announcement, despite personal setbacks in the spring General Assembly session.

"I am proud of the battles I have fought and won, I am proud of the set-

Schlickman was unsuccessful last spring in an attempt to block the election of Rep. W. Robert Blair as House Speaker. Since then, the two have battled over legislation and political appointments. Blair recently dumped Schlickman as chairman of the legislative advisory commission to the Northeast Illinois

Planning Commission.

MAINE TOWNSHIP Committeeman Floyd Fulle, Wheeling Township Committeeman Richard Cowen and State Sen. John Nimrod supported his candidacy, Schlickman said.

Nimrod and Arlington Heights Mayor Jack Walsh attended the press conference yesterday in Des Plaines.

Schlickman, known for controversial support of parochial, zoning reform and regional planning, said he will work to secure homeowner protection against shoddy home construction, for land-use planning, regional mass transit, elimination of sales tax on drugs and medicine, and legislative and election reform.

"I will not accept contributions exceeding $100 from any source, no contributions from any corporation or special interest groups," he said. "All contributions must come from individuals."

Schlickman said he will open his 1974 campaign records to the press.

Schlickman said he plans to play a vital part in choosing a speaker for the House in the spring; "I can see myself going further than I did this time," he said.

Playhouse chief helps drama pupils

Greg Monaco, dancer, actor and director of the Willow Playhouse in Deerfield last week shared his theatrical experiences with Aulav Stevenson High School drama students.

Monaco was the first person to appear at Stevenson as part of an effort to better acquaint students with the performing arts.

A newly formed Performing Arts Group is seeking other stage veterans to communicate their knowledge with pupils. The group is made up of teachers, students and leaders of the community.

Monaco, a graduate of Northwestern University's theatre school, is a summer stock veteran and has danced with several companies in Chicago and the Stuttgart National Ballet.

He discussed his experiences with the Stevenson drama group that will present "You're A Good Man, Charlie Brown" at the school Nov. 9 and 10.

Bloodhounds trained

New sleuths: Darling and Lady

by JOHN MAES

Chicago police are training three new rookies for investigative work as super sleuths.

But the rookies are not policemen — they are police bloodhounds recently acquired for the department's canine training center at 320 Touhy Ave., Des Plaines.

The hounds — Darling, 6; Lady and Big Red, both 10 months — are being integrated into what was previously an all-German Shepherd outfit, according to Lt. Robert O'Toole, supervisor of the dog training unit.

"The state penal farm at Vandalia is phasing the dogs out of their program so we took them," O'Toole said.

The dogs will be used for anything from sniffing out criminals to searching buildings and tracking down lost children, according to O'Toole.

O'TOOLE SAID the use of bloodhounds is a test program to see how they will perform as police dogs. "If it's determined the hounds are giving us something the shepherds don't, they'll be maintained on a regular basis."

During the training at the Des Plaines school, the dogs will be oriented to the tasks of big city sniffing. "These dogs are basically farm-oriented," O'Toole said. "There's a big difference in the types of scents a police dog will encounter in the city as opposed to a farm area so they'll have to be reoriented."

At the center, police put the dogs through an obstacle course consisting of a series of jumps, climbs and platforms designed to train the dogs in various sniffing and tracking techniques.

Police dogs are used on patrols in high-crime areas in Chicago on a regular basis where the sniffing and tracking abilities of a dog are most needed by police.

O'TOOLE MENTIONED certain Chicago parks, areas in the loop, and CTA elevated train platforms "where crime patterns develop" as places where the dogs are used most frequently.

The bloodhounds will probably not be used on routine patrols, O'Toole said but will be saved for special tracking assignments.

"Bloodhounds are excellent sniffers, but just don't have the natural protective instinct towards their handlers that German Shepherds do."

During training, each dog is handled and cared for exclusively by a single officer assigned to the dog. When not training at the center, the dogs remain at home with their handler.

German Shepherds become protective of their handlers whereas the bloodhounds are not that "aggressive," he said.

"Police dogs seem to enjoy their work too," O'Toole said. "They always seem to be anxious to go with their officer." The average police dog sees about eight to 10 years of service on the 47-dog unit, he said.

Commuter station at Park has doubled its business

Use of the new commuter station at Arlington Park Race Track has doubled in the one month the depot has been open, a Chicago and North Western Ry. spokesman said yesterday.

An average of 550 passengers are now boarding commuter trains at Arlington Park, compared to about 275 people during the first week the station opened Sept. 1.

At the current passenger level, the railroad says it is projecting additionally yearly revenues in excess of $100,000.

Joseph Marren, assistant director of public affairs for the North Western, said the ridership was "larger than we had hoped for" for this time of year.

More than 300 cars are now parking in the lot adjacent to the Arlington Park station. There is room for 800 cars.

Use of the Arlington Park stop has eased slightly congestion at the Arlington Heights depot, the largest suburban commuter station in the Chicago area.

SALES OF monthly commuter passes for the Arlington Heights station dropped 103, from 3,022 to 2,899, between September and October. Monthly ticket sales dropped in Palatine from 1,767 to 1,722, according to Marren.

At Arlington Park, monthly passes jumped from 0 to 412.

The race track stop was the first new commuter station to be opened on the Chicago and North Western commuter lines since 1925, Marren said.

The depot, built by the Village of Arlington Heights at a cost of $100,000, was contemplated in the 1969 annexation agreement between Arlington Park and the village.

Over $300,000 was spent on the entire facility, with the railroad paying for all track and platform work and the race track meeting the expenses of parking and fencing.

In addition to commuters from Arlington Heights and Palatine, Arlington Park draws riders from Buffalo Grove, Long Grove, Rolling Meadows, Schaumburg, Hoffman Estates and other communities off of the railroad's main line.

Wheeling band sets 50-ton paper drive

The Wheeling High School band and orchestra will attempt to collect 50 tons of paper in a drive Nov. 16, 17, 18 and 19.

Drop-off will be at the rear of the high school at 900 S. Elmhurst Road and at the Wheeling Park District office, 222 S. Wolf Rd.

For persons unable to deposit papers at the drop-off points, arrangements to have them picked up may be made by calling 537-2925.

STRATEGY OF THE rook, or castle, is explained by Jude Acers, chess master, to Shawn Dyokan, a student of Aldrin School, Schaumburg. Acers visited students Friday to encourage their interest in the game of thinkers. He will play simultaneous games with all challengers for each of six sets of games, scheduled for 3 and 7 p.m. today, tomorrow and Thursday in the grand court of Woodfield Mall, Schaumburg.

TRAVEL LORE

by Clare Wright, TRAVEL EDITOR

When traveling overseas being well-informed can be almost as important as experience.

If you're soon to be a "first-timer" in the jet gang, here are a few helpful bits of "know how."

• Foreign currency: Even though you'll probably be carrying travelers checks (and perhaps an American Express card), be sure to have small amounts of the currency of the country you're heading for — before you arrive, if possible.

• Dining: People in foreign countries eat at different times than we do. In Mediterranean, Middle Eastern and tropical countries, lunch is followed by a siesta, with all shops and businesses closed.

Dinner is after dark — usually around 8 or 9 p.m.

In certain northern countries, however, and in lands where the British flag flies, dinner is quite often "supper" and is served early.

• Mail: Don't try to be ahead of yourself and purchase a whole bundle of airmail stamps before you leave home. Stamps for letters and cards mailed from foreign countries have to be bought in the country where the mail is posted. Stamps are readily available at hotel desks. If you have friends and family back home who want to keep you up on the local news while you're gallivanting, suggest they purchase the handy, inexpensive aérograms at any U.S. post office.

• Water: I still say — if you have doubts, DON'T. Even though we're told that water in Europe and British-tradition countries is quite safe, we still stick to bottled waters, carbonated drinks and coffee and tea.

• Foods: When you travel in the tropics or in Oriental countries, it's a good idea to eat only cooked foods or raw fruits that come in their own skin which you can remove. In Western countries, it is usually safe to eat salads, fruits and foods you would select at home. But — don't forget one important rule wherever you go. Eat lightly.

• Electric appliances: If at all possible, leave them at home. Electric outlets, sockets, plugs and voltages are different in Europe, South America, much of the Orient, South Seas, all of Africa, and on many ocean liners.

Small appliances, like shavers or hair dryers, can be taken provided they have voltage transformers and plug connections. Be sure, however, to check out the voltages in each country before using them.

By the way, barber shops overseas charge much less for haircuts and shaves. Most beauty shops are cheaper than ours too.

• "Where am I?": It's not difficult at all to find yourself hopelessly lost in a foreign city — even if you're only on a short stroll near your hotel. A good tip is to keep the name and address of your hotel on a card in your pocket or purse.

• Help: When you find yourself in trouble (a canceled flight, no hotel room, lost traveler's checks) get in touch with the government tourist bureau. If there is none available, look for a local travel agent.

When the trouble is catastrophic — such as a sudden and serious need for hospitalization — get in touch with the American Embassy office immediately.

Above all, don't forget to bone up on travel guidebooks and other information about the countries you'll be visiting.

And — most important of all — rely on your travel agent.

MARCO ISLAND — A South Seas-type resort retreat on the Florida coast — has a championship, 18-hole golf course at the Marco Island Country Club. Golf is only one of the recreation activities on the island, which is connected to the mainland by two bridges. You also can quickly fly there from Miami.

Travel briefs

NEW NORTH POINT TRAVEL AGENCY

Bon Voyage Travel Inc. will open new facilities at the North Point Shopping Center, Arlington Heights and Rand Roads, in Arlington Heights, next Monday, Oct. 15.

The new agency office, which will handle both personal and business travel, is the 15th Bon Voyage Travel location in the Chicagoland area.

Mrs. Toni Emanuele, who has had 13 years experience as a travel counselor, will head the North Point office, according to Joe Heitzinger, president of Bon Voyage Travel.

Hours in the travel agency office will be 9 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Monday through Friday, and from 9 a.m. until 3 p.m. on Saturdays.

To observe the opening of its new branch at North Point, Bon Voyage is sponsoring a pumpkin coloring contest for boys and girls in the area.

Five prizes of $35, $25, $15, $10, and $5 will be awarded for the best decorated jack-o-lantern pumpkins. Winners will be announced at 2:30 p.m. Oct. 27, at the new North Point office of Bon Voyage Travel.

ATTEND A ROYAL WEDDING

The British Tourist Authority is announcing bargain rates for eight and 14-day tours to London in connection with a host of special fall events and pageants climaxed by Princess Anne's wedding Nov. 14 in Westminster Abbey, London.

Two royal processions will follow the route from Buckingham Palace to Westminster Abbey on the Royal wedding day.

The wedding will start at 11:30 and last 50 minutes. The Princess and her new husband will then drive back to the Palace in the rarely-used glass coach, followed by the Queen's procession.

With an eight-day GIT tour (as low as $404) you can fly to London with a guaranteed place to stay, take in the pageantry and be back in a week, with an experience you'll remember all your life.

Visitors, like tides, return to Marco Island repeatedly

by SUSIE MILBOURNE

The gentle tides of the Gulf of Mexico lap ceaselessly upon the platinum beach of Marco Island, seemingly impelled to return again and again.

Visitors are soon caught up in the serenity of Marco Island, a resort retreat on Florida's southern West Coast.

The island is the largest of the famed Ten Thousand Islands, water-bound refuges characterized by teeming wildlife populations and twisted mangrove borders.

NATURE BUFFS enjoy the unspoiled setting. But a full variety of activities and facilities offers something to interest every visitor, from the championship 18-hole Marco Island Country Club golf course to the secluded miles of shell-filled beaches.

Boating enthusiasts discover new wonders every time they venture into the waters surrounding Marco Island.

More than 150 species of fish have been discovered in the surrounding waters.

Fishing guides to lead visiting anglers into the waters of the Ten Thousand Islands are available at many locations on the island, Marco Inn, Marco Beach Hotel and Villas, Marco Lodge and Goodland Marina are among the places where guides can be arranged.

Airboat rides through portions of the 'Glades, departing from Everglades City, and guided tours of nearby Corkscrew Swamp Sanctuary are also available.

ACCOMMODATIONS for visitors have a touch of the unusual, too, on Marco Island. The famed Marco Inn was built in 1883 and still retains the quaintness of past eras.

The posh new Marco Beach Hotel and Villas provides luxury with a Polynesian flair. The 10-story, 532-room hotel rises like an exotic palace from the island's white sand beach. Villas border the beach or the free, par-three golf course.

Golfing, sailboating, tennis, gourmet dining and entertainment, shelling, bicycling and swimming are but a few of the many activities offered guests of this resort.

Like the never-ending surf, visitors return again and again to Marco Island, for it is more than just a vacation place. It is a Florida slice of paradise, South Sea Islands-style.

(Susie Milbourne is a Florida travel writer)

Starting December 16, Eastern will bring to Chicago the first hourly non-stop flights to Miami/Ft. Lauderdale.

Whether you want to leave at 9 in the morning or 5 in the evening, we have a schedule to fit yours. If you're going to Miami, flights leave O'Hare on the odd hours from 9 to 5. If you're going to Ft. Lauderdale, flights depart on the even hours.

If you fly later, Eastern's 9 pm After-dinner Flights to both cities are about 20% less than regular day coach fare.

Whenever you plan to fly to Florida, Eastern's hourly service, on roomy redesigned 727 Whisperjets*, now makes it possible. And the same convenient 9 to 5 service that brings you to Miami/Ft. Lauderdale can also take you back.

And if you're planning a winter vacation in Florida, Eastern offers a wide variety of vacation packages as well. Your travel agent, working with our knowledgeable reservations people, can offer you an assortment of winter vacation experiences at prices that are affordable.

The new hourly non-stop service to Miami/Ft. Lauderdale is one more way Eastern is working harder for your dollar. Just call your travel agent or Eastern at 467-2900 in Chicago. Let us be your wings.

Suburban Living

ESPECIALLY FOR THE FAMILY

Newlyweds return to college

Although their hometowns have been only a few miles apart, Linda Kay Klein of Palatine and Richard Williams Wells, formerly of Arlington Heights, never met until they were freshmen at Northeast Missouri State University in 1970. Now they are man and wife, having been married Aug. 25 in an evening ceremony at First Christian Church in Kirksville, Mo.

Linda is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. LeRoy J. Klein of 975 N. Saratoga. Richard's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Gene F. Wells, recently moved to Justice, Ill.

The bride was attended by Cindy Hays, Monroe City, Mo., as maid of honor; Patty Dugan, Stamford, Conn.; Mrs. William Hays, Monroe City; and Miriam Simon, Toledo, Ohio, as bridesmaids; and her sister, Mary Klein, as junior bridesmaid.

IN THE GROOM'S party were his brother, Robert Wells of Elgin, as best man; Dennis Huffman, Schaumburg; Gary Bratko, Hoffman Estates; and Steve Clem, St. Louis, Mo., as groomsmen; and the bride's brother, Fred Klein, junior groomsman.

William Hays and Joseph Hagan Jr., both from Monroe City, seated the guests.

Cousins of the bride, Becky and Lori Plasters of Springfield, Ill., sang with guitar accompaniment during the marriage service.

A dinner reception was served following the ceremony at Elaine's Dining Room in Kirksville.

The couple now lives in Kirksville

Marquette grads married Sept. 1, live in Chicago

Greg William Renz of Arlington Heights and his bride, the former Mary Ann Hickey of Beaver Dam, Wis., are making their first home in a Chicago apartment while Greg attends law school at the University of Chicago.

Both are '72 graduates of Marquette University, Milwaukee, and until her marriage Mary Ann was employed in Madison in the office of the Wisconsin lieutenant governor.

Greg, son of Mr. and Mrs. Kendrick Renz, 116 E. Orchard, and Mary Ann, daughter of the Thomas H. J. Hickeys, were married Sept. 1 in St. Patrick's Catholic Church, Beaver Dam. A restaurant reception followed the 1 p.m., double ring service.

Mary Ann was attended by her sister, Margaret, as maid of honor, and the groom's sisters, Debbie and Lori, as bridesmaids. Eight-year-old Martha Hickey, sister of the bride, was flower girl.

Brian Renz, Chicago, was his brother's best man, and ushers were the bride's brother, Peter, and Rick Bishel, Madera, Calif. Greg's brother, Dan, was soloist for the mass.

Clambake Sunday at Lambs Farm

The public is invited to a "clambake" Sunday afternoon, noon to 5, at the Lambs Farm, 1-94 at Route 176 exit in Libertyville. The menu includes cherry-stone, steamer and fried clams, clam chowder, plus bluepoint oysters and fish 'n chips.

There will also be entertainment for adults and children. Admission and parking are free.

The event, one of three held each year by the organization which helps provide for and train mentally retarded young adults, is intended to raise funds for a building program.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard W. Wells

while they finish school at Northeast Missouri. The groom is a 1970 graduate of Arlington High School.

Rep. Sam Young guest at dinner

Rep. Sam Young (R-Ill.) will be guest of honor and speaker for a smorgasbord dinner at 5 p.m. Sunday at Nielson's Restaurant, sponsored by Main Township Republican Woman's Club.

In addition to maintaining his own law firm in Chicago and attending to his Congressional duties, Young serves on the House Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, the subcommittee on Commerce and Finance, and the Republican Task Force on Aging, for which he has just introduced two bills permitting retired people to increase their incomes under the Social Security program.

Dinner reservations are $5 and the public is welcome. Reservations should be made with Jeanne Killian, 824-8374, or Geraldine Matushek, 824-4252.

Marriage workshops set

"Intimacy and Communication in Marriage," is the topic of a family program being sponsored by the social ministry committee at Grace Lutheran Church in Mount Prospect.

Two workshops will be held from 2 to 6 p.m. on Sunday, Oct. 14, and Sunday, Oct. 21. A fee of $15 per couple for both sessions will be charged for professional staff and instruction materials.

The seminars will be conducted by Blaine Radar and Bruce Hartung of the Community Pastoral Counseling and

Bring driver, iron 'n putter

Wednesday is the reservation deadline for the Scotch Sixsome golf outing set for Saturday, Oct. 20, by Mount Prospect Welcome Wagon Newcomers. With play at Rob Roy Country Club at 3 p.m., the nine-hole event is open to pro and novice couples.

Each couple will be instructed to bring just three clubs: driver, iron and putter. Husband and wife will tee off, choose the best drive and then alternate plays on the same ball.

Included in the price of $10 per couple are greens fees, hamburgers, side dishes, coffee and dessert.

Blue collar wives & Women's Lib

They hate it, but are changed by it

by GAY PAULEY

The women's liberation movement is much more accepted by America's middle class women than by their sisters called the blue collar wives.

It is on the blue collar housewife, however, that "lib" shows its influence "most dramatically."

These are conclusions reached in a new study devoted primarily to the changing pattern of the working class woman's life. But along the way, the researchers looked into social changes affecting the next step in status, the so-called middle class.

"Women's Lib as a movement is . . . much more accepted by middle class women," say the researchers. "They accept its goals and are less sensitive to it as derogatory toward homemaking, probably because they have not been as completely subordinated to the homemaker's role."

"HOWEVER, To many of them the lib movement is a cause which they accept without reference to themselves. Few feel that anything will be much different in their own lives because of it, for they like to believe they have always been liberated and in no need of any organization to break their chains."

"The middle class woman, thus, is more concerned about the cause than the results of women's lib, while the working class woman rejects the cause but accepts the results."

These are statements in a summary of a study done by Social Research, Inc., a Chicago-based national social and marketing research organization.

Heading the research team was Dr. Burleigh B. Gardner, founder in 1946 and now board chairman of the research group. Social Research did the study for Macfadden Women's Group, publishers of eight mass circulation magazines.

THE LATEST research is the first in detail since 1965, although Dr. Gardner says that since the late '40s "we have been examining the working class woman."

The new report includes a look at the social changes of the middle class because, as Gardner says, "you have to look at both to get a balance."

To repeat, Gardner says, the blue collar wife's life was once "captivity of the triangle of husband, children and home."

She once was considered the most stable element of American society. But no more. Gardner says these women, married to craftsmen, factory and service workers, have awakened from "sleeping giantesses" and "our society will never be the same again."

ON THE EFFECT "lib" has had on working class women, Gardner reports, "to the spokesman for women's lib, we can say, 'Take heart; you represent a cause whose time has come and have a following greater than you know.'"

Apparently, though, the working class women aren't immersed totally in liberation causes.

As the researchers state, "While working class women share . . . the conviction that women should have equality with men in pay, in choice of jobs, in opportunities and not be restrained just because they are women, the study shows that these women vociferously resent what they feel are efforts of women's lib advocates to 'put down' the role of wife, mother and homemaker."

"She still feels that her desire for husband, children and home are important to a satisfactory life, but she doesn't want to be enslaved by them."

by Dorothy Ritz

Dear Dorothy: I read the column you had giving a recipe for making mint juleps without bourbon. My only reaction is to quote Irvin S. Cobb, who said: "Any man who made a mint julep with anything but bourbon would put a scorpion in a baby's bed." — Albert J. Durante

Dear Dorothy: Concerning fiberglass curtains and breathing problems, you commented that Mrs. Spaulding's daughter probably was a rare case. Our baby son also had this problem. We spent quite a bit of money on doctor and drug bills for what we thought was "croup." Finally, we decided it might be the fiberglass draperies. Immediately after we removed the draperies his condition cleared up and he has had no more breathing problems. He was 8 months old when we took them down. He's 13 months old now and hasn't even had a cold since. — Fredia Knight

Dear Dorothy: The radiator of our car boiled over and left rust spots on our new concrete garage floor. Not knowing what to try, we used a toilet-bowl cleaner. As this is dangerous material, we were very careful and it did a good job. — Wilma Hatchett

Dear Dorothy: I'd like to share what I've found to be an ideal way to clean a stone fireplace. I used soapy steel wool pads and, after finishing, washed the stone with clear water. Next morning I used an old toothbrush and went over it again with clear household bleach and it turned out as clean as when it was new. The carpet and brass were well protected, the brass covered with wet newspapers. Hope this helps someone. — Mrs. George Wickstrom

Chile murder unnecessary

The murder of Frank Teruggi Jr. in Chile last week should not have happened, and judging from our government's handling of it, it appears it could have been prevented.

Last week the body of Teruggi, a 21-year-old Des Plaines resident and an economics student at the University of Chile, was identified in a Santiago morgue.

According to his roommate, David Hathaway, Teruggi had been arrested on Sept. 20 and had been last seen alive the following day, when Hathaway was released from a makeshift prison.

From available accounts, Teruggi's personal library contained some Marxist books, for he was a student of the Allende government and was working as a translator. The books are perhaps the major reason Teruggi was shot to death.

Theoretically, Teruggi was to have been protected by State Department personnel in the American embassy. Theoretically, he should have been shielded from violence — and, theoretically, the embassy should have kept close tabs on what was happening to American citizens at the height of the September bloodbath.

Theory, however, did not become reality. Frank Teruggi, an American citizen, was executed. In the wake of his death one must ask questions:

— Why, for example, did the embassy allow Teruggi to be captured by the military? On Sept. 17, three days before his arrest, Teruggi sought airline tickets from his parents — a sign he was trying to get out of Chile. Why wasn't he urged to accept asylum in the American embassy?

— Why did no one in the State Department seem to know where Teruggi was after he was arrested — and if they did know, why were they unsuccessful in freeing him from the clutches of the junta? Why did Teruggi's body remain in the morgue until Oct. 3, a considerable time after the apparent execution?

— Finally, why did the State Department's confused and muddled statements about the number of Americans held by the junta prolong the tragedy for Teruggi's parents?

U.S. Rep. Sam Young, R-10th, has called for answers from the State Department on this outrage — and U.S. Sen. Charles Percy, R-Ill., has charged the State Department with apparently failing to meet its responsibilities during this affair.

Frank Teruggi Jr.

We realize an American embassy must face many difficulties in keeping track of American citizens in times of turmoil. Yet that is an embassy's job, and in this case its performance was inadequate to the task.

The full and prompt inquiry into the death of Frank Teruggi Jr. should begin immediately. Changes in embassy and State Department policy can prevent this kind of needless tragedy from occurring again to an American citizen in a foreign country.

World's poor getting poorer

by PHIL NEWSOM
UPI Foreign News Analyst

World Bank President Robert S. McNamara who once worried about guns and now is concerned with butter, has made his annual report to the bank's 122 members. The message is distressingly familiar — the world's poor are getting poorer.

McNamara, a former U.S. secretary of defense, listed a number of reasons for the "absolute" poverty which he said affects 800 million people in 100 or so developing nations.

The simplest explanation: An over-production of population which increases at the rate of 66 million per year and under-production of food. "Absolute" poverty he defined as a "condition of life so degraded by disease, illiteracy, malnutrition, and squalor as to deny its victims basic human necessities."

On the other hand, among developing nations it has been found that 55 per cent of the national income goes to the upper 20 per cent of the population and only five per cent to the lowest 20 per cent.

Partly as result world bank emphasis is shifting to the agricultural sector of the developing countries with a view to increasing production and improving the lot of the small farmer.

In this connection, the OECD has drawn up a list of the 25 least-developed countries of the world and a composite picture of the world's poorest farmer.

Of the 25 poorest countries, one, Haiti, is in the western hemisphere, 16 are in central or southern Africa, four are in Asia, one, Yemen, is in the Arabian peninsula and the others are the Maldives in the Indian Ocean, Western Samoa in the Pacific and Laos in Southeast Asia.

The composite poorest farmer is illiterate, works mountainous, desert, grassland or salt-pan terrain at least 20 miles from a road and even farther away from a health service or school.

As a comparison, the average American intake of calories is about 3,000 per day divided about equally between animal products and starches, sugar and cereals. It remained stable even during the summer's meat shortage. In contrast, two thirds of the world's population gets less than 2,000 calories per day, mostly starch and sugar, or less than it got 10 years ago.

This is National Newspaper Week and somebody ought to send me a get-well card because anyone who picks newspapering for a livelihood must have something wrong with them.

It's probably the deadlines that make us goofy and it doesn't matter what department a person works in, it's part of the end product which is a newspaper which means deadlines. And spastic colitis and smoking too much and a tendency to mutter to yourself.

My brother, who was involved with seeing that automobiles came off the assembly line as per schedule, once told me to shut up about the pressure of deadlines, that every business has them but it's only journalists who talk about them all the time.

But I'd just heard that I'd have to wait six weeks for some drapes I'd ordered and a repairman had come to the house two days after he said he would and the grocery store was out of an item I wanted because the delivery truck was late.

So I told my brother, "Oh yeah," and he said, "Yeah," because we have intelligent discussions like that all the time.

Then he picked up a newspaper and waved it under my nose. "Look at that, typographical errors in a front page story, is that what you're so proud of?"

And I said, "You want to come look at my brand new car? It's so full of typographical errors that I get a trunkful of water and a puddle on the floor every time it rains and if I ever took it through a car wash I'd have to wear scuba gear."

He said, "That's different," and I said, "Oh yeah," and then we had another round of sparkling dialogue.

Next he challenged me to tell him where the word "deadline" came from and I told him that the first journalist in the world didn't get a story done on time so the boss hit him over the head with the stone tablet he was chiseling and knocked the guy dead just before he finished the last line.

And Bud said, "Hey — that's interesting. Now tell me why journalism is called the Fourth Estate."

So I told him how in the old days in England there were three Estates of the Realm — the lords spiritual, the lords temporal and commons — and one day Thomas Carlyle wrote, "Burke said there were Three Estates in Parliament," but, in the Reporters' Gallery yonder, there sat a Fourth Estate more important far than they all."

And Bud said, "There you go again, making things up."

Sometimes I think brothers are worse than deadlines.

Incorporation defended

Recently I have noticed a few letters appearing in the newspaper that have been critical of the incorporation of Prospect Heights, the PHIA, and its president, Jack Gilligan. Being active in our community I can only say that it is very obvious that these people are ill-informed and are lacking understanding of the problems of our community. I further take offense to these people because their rash conclusions may be prohibiting me as to what kind of community I have to live in.

Prior to the PHIA and our representatives in Congress getting us the law on the state books, I did not have the choice to even vote, for or against incorporation. I did not have a say. Those who oppose the incorporation effort must never have been in the predicament of having an apartment complex built next door, or having their homes flooded because the neighboring municipality allowed a building to go up which now causes you the problem. The Environmental Protection Agency can't tear those structures down to rectify anything. Of course you the homeowner can sue the builder yourself. But I am sure you would not be willing to part with that kind of money when an established community could have prevented that type of building in the first place.

As the prospects for incorporation become more of a reality than a dream to most of us, the guardhouse lawyers and soap box preachers are portraying a picture of gloom and despair. If they were aware of the effort the PHIA and its board members have given on their behalf they wouldn't be so critical. However, what do they care that they are trying to deprive me of the opportunity, by vote, to choose rather than to be told what my community is to become? What do they care if incorporation means that I will finally be able to raise objections to the surrounding villages because they are overcrowding our schools that I will have to pay higher taxes for, because they are causing additional severe flooding, generating more traffic on our residential streets, building unsightly water tanks and a host of other problems associated in the re-zoning and building around us? I don't have that choice presently. Obviously you who object don't live under the dread of forced annexation because you don't live on the fringes. This is the time to worry! You may in a few years find that you are now the fringe with no one to listen to your objections. To incorporate means that you will get the choice with whom you want to live with.

The criticism of Mr. Gilligan and the PHIA is a sorry thing. Has everyone forgot they were responsible for having the wheel-tax repealed? The same men who got the legislators to get us a law giving you the right without neighboring communities consent to incorporate if you want to. If you have anything to say, say it where it would do the most good. Go to the meetings, find out the true intent, voice your comments and objections, contribute, become knowledgeable. Then I say that you would have the right to be quoted in print. If you do not want to become informed, then at least get off your soap boxes and wait until all the cards are dealt before making any bets. The only one to win or lose in this game is you and your neighbors. Make the bet an informed one — get the facts first.

Harold Kargenian

'Press needs ethics, too'

Your recent editorial "Public Spotlight on Ethics" was read with much interest. And I agree with you, with reservations, that all elected officials, candidates for elective office and appointed public officials be required to make full disclosure of all sources of their income, detail the source of all of their campaign contributions and also give a strict accounting of their campaign expenditures.

I further agree with your contention that the public is fed up with the "deceit and hypocrisy" at all levels of government.

But you didn't go far enough, and this is where my reservation comes in. For if the disciplines you propose are to be fairly applied, they should also include, without exception, all editorial writers who comment on the political scene and the politicians who comprise it, all reporters who report on political activity, all columnists and commentators who "analyze" political actions of parties and persons.

And since we know the political party affiliations of elected and appointed officials, I further recommend that all writers and commentators concerning themselves with being political watchdogs, be required to give sworn statements as to their party affiliations and how they vote in each local, state, and federal election conducted along political party lines. (And if you prefer, this could also be applied to all persons who write letters to editors.)

I make this suggestion because I know that among the public, of my acquaintance at least, there is just as much "distrust, disillusionment and cynicism" with the press as there is with politicians. Maybe even more. I feel that in this day of "advocacy" journalism, the political writers and commentators have become a part of the political process and thus should be subject to the same disciplines as elected officials.

'We want best garbage service'

In your September 28 edition a letter from a reader backs our local garbage service because they have been 45 years in Arlington Heights. For all those years they have been paid extremely well for services and by no means a renewal of contract should be issued with their present bid.

Mrs. W. Such states that a "mere 25 cents a week — you are wasting your times in bids," but anyone can multiply $1.03 (proposed increase by Laseke times 12 (months in a year) times 20,000 (approx. homes and apartment bldgs.) and what happens? It goes into thousands of dollars.

It is my belief a company like Laseke should thank the Arlington Heights community for their 45 years of service by offering a better service for a minimum increase.

I give all my credit to the village of Arlington Heights and those women and men that organized showing that we are community minded citizens wanting quality and good service acceptable to our pockets (like those so far proposed by other garbage services offering large items pick up and lesser cost in comparison with Laseke actual bid).

Let the best offer and service company be the winner and earn this contract.

A. O. Garcia

Hasapes named health facilities director

George N. Hasapes, 41, of Skokie, a former hospital administrator and Blue Cross executive, has been named executive director of the new Illinois Health Facilities Authority.

Announcement of the appointment was made by Stanford L. Glass, chairman of the seven-member public body created by the 1972 legislature to provide low-interest financing for nonprofit, private hospitals and other health institutions in Illinois.

Hasapes held administrative posts with several Pennsylvania hospitals before serving from 1966 to 1972 as vice president of government programs-operations for Blue Cross Association. He spent the past year making a special study of health services and financing in Yugoslavia and Greece under a Health Services Fellowship Program grant from University of Chicago and U.S. Department of Health Education and Welfare.

The new director earned the BBA degree from University of Pittsburgh School of Business Administration and MS degree from the university's Graduate School of Public Health — Department of Medical and Hospital Administration. He is a member of American College of Hospital Administrators, American Public Health Association and Royal Society of Health.

In addition to appointment of an executive director, Glass announced the authority had selected the Chicago law firm of Rosenthal & Shanefield as its general counsel.

Gov. Daniel Walker completed his appointments to the new authority in June, and the body's first meeting was held July 9.

Maine East trails York at invite; Fremd in 5th

Cross Country Editor

The Peoria cross country Invitational again this year was billed as the "little state meet" and everyone except York's Dukes are glad it wasn't the real thing. It is becoming a regular habit of the Dukes to roll to the titles of both this classic and the state finals, and it happened again Saturday on the Detweiller Park three-mile course near Peoria where the state meet is also held each year.

Couch Joe Newton's gang tallied just 36 points to 166 for Maine East, the nearest contender. In a huge field that included 41 teams and about 300 runners, the Dukes grabbed first, third, seventh, 10th, 26th, 27th and 37th places.

Third through seventh, in order, were Peoria Central, Peoria West, Fremd, Rockford Guilford and Evanston. Arlington, the only other Heralt area entry, was 12th.

Since only Riverside-Brookfield was absent among the state's top teams, the "little state meet" tag was again legitimate.

It was the first meet of any kind that Fremd has not won this fall, and coach Ron Menely said, "It sure didn't look like my crew that ran today."

"No one ran well except York," he went on. "They ran up to their potential, a beautiful race, but the others didn't even approach what they can do."

"Our kids were excited at the start and they went out way too fast. I had seven kids between 2:08 and 2:12 for the first half-mile. Even Craig Virgin didn't start that fast. By the end, they were dead."

Only Chuck Ruppenthal ran about as well as usual, pacing the Vikings with 16th place in 13:05. Jim Galls was 32nd, WIN Fieldhouse 48th, Mike Bohrer 60th, Paul Kinyon 74th, Dave Scott 83rd and John Miller 87th.

Scott Brown of York was the winner with 14:43.2 over the three-mile course where Virgin set a record with 13:50 in last year's state meet.

Maine East's Lloyd Spitzer placed fifth in 14:51 as the Blue Demons finished second behind York. Other scorers were Dave Jenkins 33rd, Bill Brown 39th, Mark Tomasiak 42nd and Tim Glanos 47th.

Arlington's top runner was Mike Hosenman with 64th while John Lerchenfeld was 70th and Greg Hansen 84th. Others were Bob Walsworth, Mike Dollanajec, Steve Cripe and Steve Maxwell.

Elsewhere over the weekend, Palatine and Conant were the Mid-Suburban League's most successful teams and St. Viator watched a dual meet victory.

Palatine finished second in the 59-school Crete-McCrea Pow-Wow, trailing only Riverside-Brookfield. Conant, after pulling a narrow upset over Hersey in a Thursday dual meet, was third in the Niles East Invitational, even though coach Jack Ary felt his Cougars let down a little after being so high for the Hersey meet.

With the win over the Huskies, Conant — which has the best team in its nine-year history — took over sole possession of second place in the MSL with only one loss, that by 15-50 to Fremd.

Hersey is third and Palatine fourth in the dual-meet standings, with each team having nine decisions already on the record with two duals to go. The conference meet at Prospect Thursday, Oct. 18 and the dual standings each count half toward final finishes.

At Crete-McCrea, Palatine had 42 points against Riverside's 17. Seven different races are run in first through seventh flights for varsity runners — each school having one runner in each race.

For the Pirates, Paul Kearns was 10th in Flight 1 with 15:09 for 2.9 miles. Dave Tehle was third in Flight 2 with 15:24. John Thullen 10th in Flight 3. Carl Kiewert the winner in Flight 4, Rick Scholl 11th in Flight 5, Bob Guthrie third in Flight 6, and Pete Kearns 10th in Flight 7.

Riverside-Brookfield won all flights except the fourth where Kiewert won. Rolling Meadows was 24th in the 42-team Division A. Its runners, from first through seventh flights, were Steve Lehman, Mike Scott, Craig Dahlquist, Bill Bradley, Jim Huddleston, Bob Kuhn and Bruce Mathey.

The championship flight was won by Mike Marks of R-B with Jack LeMaster of Moline second and Charlie White of Thornton, last year's 880-yard state champion, third.

Conant's 27-29 triumph over Hersey was paced by Dave Elderkin's 14:42 for first place on the Cougars' 2.75-mile course. Ron Stephan, Jay McCarthy and Chris Cooney followed for Hersey, but Conant's depth told the story after that as the Huskies had their usual problem of not enough support after the top three.

The Cougars' next finishers, nailing down the victory, were John Bond, Mark Kaufman, Dave Mansolf, and Steve Watron.

At Niles East, in an 18-school field, only Notre Dame (48) and Waukegan (83) were ahead of Conant (165). Hersey was sixth and St. Viator 10th.

Tim Riley of Notre Dame won in 13:32 for 2.7 miles. Elderkin again led Conant with 13:51 for seventh overall. Kaufman was 13th, McCarthy and Cooney 16th and 17th for Hersey, then Conant's Rick Jensen 26th, Bond 29th, Mansolf 30th and Watron 33rd.

Ary stressed that Conant's entire harrier program was strong at Niles East, bringing home three trophies, as the sophomores were champions behind Mike Monson's fifth and Mike Moran's sixth, and the freshmen were second. Hersey's frosh were fifth.

At the 22-school Ridgewood Invitational, Maine West beat Fenton, 81-101, for top honors and had three runners among the top dozen places. Joe Paul placed sixth, Paul Frost 11th and Greg Klebe 12th. Glen Oland ran 15th and Kevin Skahan 37th for Maine.

Maine North ran eighth overall, led by Bill Fancher's 17th and Brad Furukawa's 22nd, and third behind Ridgewood and Notre Dame in the small school division. Wheeling finished 11th and Elk Grove 16th in the major classification.

Augie Ziccaroli and Rich Reese paced Wheeling with 46th and 55th, followed by Jim Leeper, Steve Erickson and Roy Sackett. Elk Grove's top runner was Dave Jackson with a strong 13th.

In other dual meets, Wheeling toppled Buffalo Grove 20-36. Schaumburg was a 23-32 winner over Rolling Meadows, and St. Viator beat Holy Cross 25-31.

Leeper won the race for Wheeling with 16:10 for three miles and Jeff Schuster was one second behind for Buffalo Grove.

Arnie Jackson remained undefeated for all meets this fall with 15:45 over three miles for Schaumburg, followed by teammates Mike Palmer and Mike Hommon. Craig Dahlquist and Jim Huddleston paced Rolling Meadows.

St. Viator coach Ken Peck called the win over Holy Cross the best race the Lions have run, as Mark Nelles (19:02 for 3.2 miles), Bob Kohn and Marty Lechleider grabbed the top three places.

KINGS OF THE COURSE, these Lions are. Finishing first all fall. The Lions were 25-31 winners on their home and second in a meet against Holy Cross are St. Viator's Mark Nelles and Bob Kohn, who have paced the varsity course.

Arlington girls dominate league tennis tourney

Capturing all but one of the individual titles, Arlington's girls easily repeated as the Mid-Suburban Conference champions Saturday.

Couch Mary Lou Hunt's team, undefeated in dual meets, rolled up 82 overall points to outdistance second place Prospect with 63.

Roundout the rest of the also-rans were Fremd 49, Palatine 45, Forest View 37, Rolling Meadows 40, Wheeling 37, Hersey 21, Elk Grove 20, Conant 20, Hoffman Estates 14, Schaumburg 13 and Buffalo Grove 7. Hersey and Buffalo Grove have one more dual left.

Arlington won two of the three singles titles behind Clare Gates and Mary Baines. Gates, seeded No. 1 in first singles, beat Robin Helleman of Prospect 6-3, 6-4. The latter was seeded No. 2.

Baines, seeded first in second singles, defeated Carol Hoffnagle of Prospect 6-1, 6-2. Hoffnagle was unseeded.

Jean Tezny helped the rest of the league avoid an Arlington whitewash by winning third singles for Prospect. She defeated Renee Koozt of Fremd 6-4, 6-0. Rezy was seeded third and Koozt wasn't seeded.

The Arlington doubles teams also romped to straight set victories.

Jean Condon and Nancy Cunningham, seeded No. 1 as were all of the Arlington combinations, posted a pair of 6-0 wins over Forest View's Janet Gust and Sue Jansen in first doubles action.

Dianne Dewitt and Amy Redeen stopped Prospect's second seeded team of Gema Copazzoli and Laurel Allseits 6-4, 7-5.

Cathy Depew and Sue Wrapp also ended the hopes of a second seeded — Palatine's Sheila Chambers and Maureen Gerdes — 6-0, 6-3.

Finally, in the meeting of first and second seeds for the third straight time, Patty Pinski and Leslie Grabitz stopped Prospect's Sue Eggert and Mara Rautenberg 6-1, 6-0.

Buffalo Grove records win over Forest View

by KEITH REINHARD

He who scores last scores best is the way Buffalo Grove paraphrased an old proverb Saturday afternoon.

After Forest View had jarred the scoreboard early, the Bisons thundered back with three-and-one-half scores of their own to win the Jayvee tussle at home, 25-8.

The Falcons had a legitimate reason for slipping behind. They didn't have control of the football very much... especially in the second half when the hosts pulled away to their fourth triumph in succession this season.

Once again it was that man Dave Smith leading the way for the Grovers. The six-foot, 160-pound signal-caller passed for one touchdown, ran across two others, kicked a pair of extra points and topped things off with a field goal.

All of Smith's antics occurred after the visitors had shocked the partisan crowd by moving ahead 8-0 four plays into the game. John O'Brien set up the scoring play with a 12-yard flip to Tony Donile that pushed the line of scrimmage just beyond midfield.

Next play Rick Mirro shot up the middle on a power dive and raced 48 yards for the score. Neil Schmidt faked a handoff on the conversion and skirted wide around right end to put the Bisons further in the hole.

It didn't take long for coach Grant Blaney's outfit to counter however. Smithern climaxed a five-play blitz originating at the BG 24-yard stripe by zeroing in on Rich Brinsmade for a 67-yard scoring pass.

Smithern's subsequent extra point kick left the Falcons holding a narrow 8-7 edge.

And that lead lasted only until the second period when Smithern went over himself from the one to cap a 88-yard march. Smithern then faked the point after kick and John Arendall swooped around end to make it 15-8.

In the third quarter the Bisons took 15 plays to drive 66 yards for their third TD. Smithern going over from the one and adding the EP kick. That ate away most of the period and on the subsequent kickoff Forest View fumbled and the hosts were back in control.

The two teams traded interceptions on the next three plays. George Bastable snagging his second of the day on behalf of the Grove. Then the Bisons went on the march again through most of the fourth quarter with Smithern's 30-yard field goal winding it up.

With two minutes to go in the game the Falcons finally gained ball control. To that moment they had run only two offensive plays the entire second half.

Rich Vickery intercepted for the hosts to end that final FV threat.

GOING TO THE DOGS. Scott Bittner of Arlington is surrounded by Hersey linemen and brought down after an eight-yard gainer. The Cardinals dented the Huskie wall for 138 yards Friday night but found payday only once while succumbing 26-6. Moving in on the tackle are Brian Nelson (77), and Jeff Reinhard (72).

Prospect takes command in league golf action

Prospect took command of the Mid-Suburban League's fall golf standings with victories over challenging Fremd and Schaumburg while upping its record to an unblemished 10-0.

The Knights fired 163 to topple Fremd's 166 and Schaumburg's 183 with Craig Ridley leading the way with a 38, both Ron Swanson and Steve Spielman contributing 41's and John McBride notching a 43.

The Vikings dropped into a second place tie with Hersey and Palatine at 8-2 behind Cliff Garcia's 40, Jeff Rubak's 41, another 41 by Jim Higley and Bob Frank's 44. Schaumburg countered with Dale Jensen's 42, Jim Norman's 43, Scott Governale's 48 and Keith Abrahams' 50.

Conant leveled its conference record at 5-5 by shooting 161 to Rolling Meadows' 173 and Buffalo Grove's 175. The Cougars rode Kevin Eakins' 38, Cary Demont's 40, Pete Pavich's 41 and 42's by Ken Kennitz and Dave Sidlin.

Meadows earned a split for the afternoon as Ken Hatfield and Scott Burihardt carded 41's, Bob Kiele hit 45 and Tom Schramm contributed 46. Buffalo Grove solved Golden Acres Golf Course for Mike Scherman's 42, 44's by Rick Groessl and Brian Allsmiller and Dan Krolack's 45.

Before I joined the Payroll Savings Plan, all I could save was string.

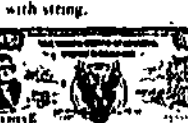

When it comes to saving money, most of us can use all the help we can get.

Joining the Payroll Savings Plan is one easy way to force yourself to save. When you sign up, an amount you specify is set aside from each paycheck and used to buy U.S. Savings Bonds. It's automatic. Everything is done for you.

And now there's a bonus interest rate on all U.S. Savings Bonds—for 5 years, 10 months (4% the first year). That extra 1/4%, payable as a bonus at maturity, applies to all bonds issued since June 1, 1970... with a comparable improvement for all older bonds.

Send us your plan and before you know it you'll have a bankroll waiting. That's when you'll find you can do a lot more with money than you can with string.

Master plan sees 56,000 by 1990

Village's population may double in five years

by JOE FRANZ
A news analysis

Buffalo Grove is going through a period of rapid development that could result in the village doubling its population in the next five years.

Village Mgr. Daniel Larson predicted yesterday the village's population will grow from its present figure of about 19,200 to between 33,000 and 40,000 by 1978.

There are at least 12 major housing developments either under construction or in the planning stages, which will substantially increase the population.

THE VILLAGE master plan, soon to be adopted by the village board, predicts the village will have a population of 56,000 persons by 1990. It calls for village expansion to unincorporated areas primarily north and east of the village in Lake County.

By 1990, the master plan shows village expansion north to Ill. Rt. 22 and east to Milwaukee Avenue. The boundaries now extend to about Busch Road on the north and Buffalo Grove Road on the east. The village's western boundary near Arlington Heights Road and its southern boundary near Dundee Road is not expected to change.

In 1970, when the population was 12,000 persons, there were 3,002 dwelling units in the village. In 1972, there were 4,274, an increase of 38 per cent. Larson predicts 5,000 to 6,000 units will be constructed in the next five years.

OFFICIALS feel the growth is good for the village. In their opinion, the ideal size for a community is between 50,000 and 70,000 persons. "When a village gets to that size, it is able to provide a variety of services to meet the needs of all the people," Larson said.

Before a community reaches that size, Larson said it often is unable to afford some services because of a limited tax base. One example of this is the village's lack of a municipal fire department. Larson said when the population increases, so will tax revenues, thus making a municipal department feasible.

At the present time, 36 per cent of the village area consists of homes, 16.5 per cent of schools and parks, 2.5 per cent of commercial areas and 23 per cent of streets and utilities.

Although development trends in the village are leaning toward townhouse, condominium and apartment construction, the master plan predicts the village will remain primarily a single-family home community. However, among 12 major developments planned for the village over the next five years, only one will consist of single-family homes.

The development, Strathmore Grove, planned by Levitt and Sons Inc., will consist of 135 single-family homes. The multi-family developments could number almost 6,000. While many officials prefer single-family homes, they do not think the vast amount of multi-family units will cause any serious problems. The tax revenues generated by single-family and multi-family dwellings are about the same.

IN SOME CASES, Larson said, multi-family dwellings do not require as many village services as single-family homes. One example of this is in the case of park district facilities.

Since many condominium and townhouse developments have recreation centers, swimming pools, playgrounds and parks for their residents, they do not place a burden on village park facilities, Larson said. At the same time, the residents are still paying taxes to the park district, he added.

At the present time, about 15 per cent of the units in the village are rentals. This percentage is not expected to change significantly. Almost all the developments under construction or in the planning stages call for individual ownership of each unit.

Larson feels it would be impractical to construct low-income housing in the village at the present time. He said taxes and the cost of living in the village would make it difficult for a low-income family.

In addition, the village does not have transportation facilities or the type of employment that would attract low-income families. The type of industry Buffalo Grove hopes to attract will probably need skilled workers rather than unskilled.

Larson said he is opposed to developing an area and designating it as low- or moderate-income housing. He said such a designation is embarrassing and degrading to the families moving into it. "If we're going to have it I prefer doing it with as little fanfare as possible," he said.

ALTHOUGH there is no industry in the village at the present, about 700 acres near the Soo Line Railroad tracks has been designated for that purpose. It's predicted that it will be five to seven years before the area is developed.

"The demand to develop it is not there now, but it will be," Larson said. "When

Here's building boom breakdown

Here are some developments either under construction or proposed for Buffalo Grove over the next five years, along with locations and the number of persons each is expected to generate. They are:

- The Crossings, Ill. Rte. 83 and Old McHenry Road, 1,700 to 1,800 persons.

- Levitt and Sons Inc. (Koelper-De-muth and Wagner tracts), southeast of Arlington Heights and Aptakisic roads, about 2,000 persons.

- Scholz and Co., southeast corner of Arlington Heights and Checker roads, about 900 persons.

- Chesterfield Development Corp., northeast corner of Arlington Heights and Lake Cook roads, 600 to 800 persons.

- Phoenix Construction Co., three parcels fronting the Buffalo Grove Golf Course and a fourth near Busch Road and Ill. Rte. 83, about 3,500 persons.

- Cambridge on the Lake (final phase), Dundee Road and Lake Boulevard, about 200 persons.

- Mill Creek (final phase), Arlington Heights and Dundee roads, about 750 persons.

- Hawthorn, northeast of the Lake Cook County line and Welland Road, 3,500 to 4,000 persons.

- Hank Farm, north of Chevy Chase Country Club, about 3,000 persons.

- Link Farm, north of Busch Road and east of Ill. Rte. 83, about 2,500 persons.

It is developed industrially, it will give us a healthy tax base."

Officials feel that from one-third to one-half of the village's tax revenue should come from industrial and commercial development. Increasing the tax base in this way will take some of the burden off homeowners.

The ideal community, Larson said, should have a balance between homes and commercial and industrial development. Property tax revenues from homes, in most cases, are not adequate to provide all the services that are needed, he said.

Larson said a number of factors will

Use of new commuter station doubled

Use of the new commuter station at Arlington Park Race Track has doubled in the one month the depot has been open, a Chicago and North Western Ry. spokesman said yesterday.

An average of 330 passengers are now boarding commuter trains at Arlington Park, compared to about 275 people during the first week the station opened Sept. 1.

At the current passenger level, the railroad says it is projecting additionally yearly revenues in excess of $100,000.

Joseph Marren, assistant director of public affairs for the North Western, said the ridership was "larger than we had hoped for" for this time of year.

More than 300 cars are now parking in the lot adjacent to the Arlington Park station. There is room for 800 cars.

Use of the Arlington Park stop has eased slightly congestion at the Arlington Heights depot, the largest suburban commuter station in the Chicago area.

SALES OF monthly commuter passes for the Arlington Heights station dropped

103, from 3,022 to 2,899, between September and October. Monthly ticket sales dropped in Palatine from 1,767 to 1,722, according to Marren.

At Arlington Park, monthly passes jumped from 0 to 412.

The race track stop was the first new commuter station to be opened on the Chicago and North Western commuter lines since 1925, Marren said.

The depot, built by the Village of Arlington Heights at a cost of $100,000, was contemplated in the 1969 annexation agreement between Arlington Park and the village.

Over $300,000 was spent on the entire facility, with the railroad paying for all track and platform work and the race track meeting the expenses of parking and fencing.

Omni-House sets parenthood course

Omni-House: Youth Services Bureau is offering a 10-week course for men and women interested in becoming more effective parents.

The course, which will consist of weekly meetings on Wednesday evenings beginning Oct. 21, will be taught by social worker Ed Kusek. Kusek has done extensive consulting work for School Districts 21 and 214 and other suburban school districts.

The course will emphasize techniques that may be used by parents to modify a child's behavior by positively reinforcing desired behavior.

The classes will take the form of informal workshop sessions where parents may discuss common problems in rearing children, according to Harry Wells, Omni-House psychologist.

"The course isn't designed to uncover a family's personal problems, but to deal with common problems shared by all parents," Wells said.

The classes will be conducted at the Omni-House office, 516 N. Milwaukee Ave. Fees will be determined by a family's ability to pay, Wells said. The cost will probably range between $2 to $7 per session.

Anyone interested in registering for the course should contact Wells at 541-0190.

Wheeling band sets 50-ton paper drive

The Wheeling High School band and orchestra will attempt to collect 50 tons of paper in a drive Nov. 16, 17, 18 and 19.

Drop-off will be at the rear of the high school at 900 S. Elmhurst Road and at the Wheeling Park District office, 222 S. Wolf Rd.

For persons unable to deposit papers at the drop-off points, arrangements to have them picked up may be made by calling 537-2923.

Village denies plea for pool rule variation

The Buffalo Grove village board last night denied a request by Burt Harris for a variation to the village zoning ordinance to allow an above-ground swimming pool within three feet of his neighbor's property.

An ordinance states the pool must be at least six feet from the neighboring property line. In Harris' case, the pool is two inches over the line.

Harris, of 701 Silver Rock Lane, told the board he could move the pool about three feet, thus bringing it within three feet of complying with the ordinance. The board, however, denied the request by a 6-0 vote. The board said Harris will have to move the pool or remove it from his yard by next June 1.

Besides the pool, a filter and a fence post belonging to Harris are also on the neighboring property. He said he will remove all three objects from his neighbor's property by Saturday.

State Rep. Schlickman tells plans to seek sixth term

by AL MESSERSCHMIDT

State Rep. Eugene Schlickman will run again.

Schlickman, R-Arlington Heights, announced yesterday he will seek a sixth term to "work for an open, truly representative house . . . to continue to speak out where others hesitate."

The Arlington Heights attorney was optimistic in his fourth district candidacy announcement, despite personal setbacks in the spring General Assembly session.

"I am proud of the battles I have fought and won, I am proud of the set-

Schlickman was unsuccessful last spring in an attempt to block the election of Rep. W. Robert Blair as House Speaker. Since then, the two have battled over legislation and political appointments. Blair recently dumped Schlickman as chairman of the legislative advisory commission to the Northeast Illinois

Planning Commission.

MAINE TOWNSHIP Committeeman Floyd Fulle, Wheeling Township Committeeman Richard Cowen and State Sen. John Nimrod supported his candidacy, Schlickman said.

Nimrod and Arlington Heights Mayor Jack Walsh attended the press conference yesterday in Des Plaines.

Schlickman, known for controversial support of parochialism, zoning reform and regional planning, said he will work to secure homeowner protection against shoddy home construction, for land-use planning, regional mass transit, elimination of sales tax on drugs and medicine, and legislative and election reform.

"I will not accept contributions exceeding $100 from any source, no contributions from any corporation or special interest groups," he said. "All contributions must come from individuals."

Schlickman said he will open his 1974 campaign records to the press.

Schlickman said he plans to play a vital part in choosing a speaker for the House in the spring; "I can see myself going further than I did this time," he said.

Stevenson wrapup

Playhouse chief helps drama pupils

Greg Monaco, dancer, actor and director of the Willow Playhouse in Deerfield last week shared his theatrical experiences with Adlai Stevenson High School drama students.

Monaco was the first person to appear at Stevenson as part of an effort to better acquaint students with the performing arts.

A newly formed Performing Arts Group is seeking other stage veterans to communicate their knowledge with pupils. The group is made up of teachers, students and leaders of the community.

Monaco, a graduate of Northwestern University's theatre school, is a summer stock veteran and has danced with several companies in Chicago and the Stuttgart National Ballet.

He discussed his experiences with the Stevenson drama group that will present "You're A Good Man, Charlie Brown" at the school Nov. 9 and 10.

College reps to visit school

Additional representatives of several colleges and universities will be at Stevenson beginning next week to talk to students interested in continuing their education.

Parents interested in attending sessions with their children may call the Stevenson guidance department for appointments.

The schedule of representatives visiting the school is:

Monday — Southern Illinois University, Wisconsin College Conservatory, Carroll College.

Tuesday — Bradley University, Stephens College, Monmouth College.

Wednesday — University of Tulsa, Okla.

Thursday — St. Olaf College, Eastern Illinois University.

Friday — Hamline University (St. Paul, Minn.), Coe College.

Monday, Oct. 22 — Central College (Pella, Ia.), Lewis University (Lockport, Ill.).

Tuesday, Oct. 23 — College of Idaho.

Thursday, Oct. 25 — Marquette University.

Friday, Oct. 26 — Butler University, Valparaiso University, University of Santa Clara, Calif.

Monday, Oct. 29 — Augustana College.

Tuesday, Oct. 30 — McKendree College.

Wednesday, Oct. 31 — Illinois State University, Northern Illinois University.

The dogs will be used for anything from sniffing out criminals to searching buildings and tracking down lost children, according to O'Toole.

O'TOOLE SAID the use of bloodhounds is a test program to see how they will perform as police dogs. "If it's determined the hounds are giving us something the shepherds don't, they'll be maintained on a regular basis."

During the training at the Des Plaines school, the dogs will be oriented to the tasks of big city sniffing. "These dogs are basically farm-oriented," O'Toole said. "There's a big difference in the types of scents a police dog will encounter in the city as opposed to a farm area so they'll have to be reoriented."

At the center, police put the dogs through an obstacle course consisting of a series of jumps, climbs and platforms designed to train the dogs in various sniffing and tracking techniques.

Police dogs are used on patrols in high-crime areas in Chicago on a regular basis where the sniffing and tracking abilities of a dog are most needed by police.

O'TOOLE MENTIONED certain Chicago parks, areas in the loop, and CTA elevated train platforms "where crime patterns develop" as places where the dogs are used most frequently.

The bloodhounds will probably not be used on routine patrols, O'Toole said but will be saved for special tracking assignments.

"Bloodhounds are excellent sniffers, but just don't have the natural protective instinct towards their handlers that German Shepherds do."

During training, each dog is handled and cared for exclusively by a single officer assigned to the dog. When not training at the center, the dogs remain at home with their handler.

German Shepherds become protective of their handlers whereas the bloodhounds are not that "aggressive," he said.

"Police dogs seem to enjoy their work, too," O'Toole said. "They always seem to be anxious to go with their officer." The average police dog sees about eight to 10 years of service on the 47-dog unit, he said.

An uphill battle to claim Nike lands for public

by JOE SWICKARD
A News Analysis

The scoreboard reads: Arlington Heights Park District 13, U.S. Army 73 and undecided 52.

The above breakdown represents the acres held by the contesting parties in the struggle for control of the Arlington Heights Nike Base on Central Road. The park district hopes to shut out the Army in the future, but the fight is far from finished.

Last week the parks gained some hope in adding 52 acres to their total with the announcement by Rep. Philip M. Crane, R-12th, that the Defense Department no longer needs that parcel of land for Navy housing. The parks still must wait 30 to 90 days for the General Services Administration to poll other federal agencies to determine if any of them want the land.

The sides have been drawn up for use of the land. On one side is the Army maintaining the missile base is necessary to defend Chicago from an enemy attack. The Army also uses the site for National Guard maneuvers. The other side comprises the park district, area homeowners, a congressman and U.S. Senators.

THE ARMY FACILITY has had a checkered career. Should the parks eventually get the land, it will have served as a prison camp, an airfield, a trailer park, a missile base, an equipment depot for the Illinois National Guard and finally a golf course.

Thomas Thornton, park district director, has a six-inch-thick file, dating back 10 years, on efforts to acquire the land for a park.

"The first letter is dated Nov. 1, 1963, to U.S. Sen. Paul Douglas. We were asking about the site then. We had heard 100 acres of it was going to be declared surplus, so we included development of it in the 1964 referendum. Well, it wasn't surplus after all, so we had to change the referendum around," Thornton said of his first attempt to get part of the 137-acre site.

To Thornton, and park officials, the Nike base is an open plum in the midst of rapid urban and suburban sprawl. It is, according to him, one of the last big land parcels the district could acquire at a minimum of monetary outlay.

"Open land is needed in this growth area. We have about 350 acres of open land for 70,000 residents and the minimum ratio is 10 acres per 1,000 people. So you can see, we're in bad shape. Even with the entire base, we'd still be well below that standard," he said.

THE PARKS SCORED their first victory in improving the ratio in August when 13 acres of the base were deeded to the district. The land, across from Northwest Community Hospital, was outside the perimeter fence of the base.

A small nine-hole golf course was planned for the site, but the district took the advice of David Gill, a golf course architect, and left the land in "passive use." The plans were scrapped in favor of waiting for the Navy land and eventually the Army acreage.

"Why a golf course? Well, it's the best possible use for the land. There is no need for more picnicking areas — it's not suitable for that anyway," Thornton said.

According to him, a golf course on the land represents the best use because: 1. Golf courses are good revenue-producers. 2. The land could be used for winter recreation. 3. Storm water basins could be incorporated into the course to alleviate flooding in the village.

"We have found golf courses to be very good revenue-producers. We checked all around the area, and we don't know of any that aren't a success," Thornton said.

THORNTON'S timetable calls for acquiring the Navy land from GSA around the first of the year, construction of a nine-hole course, followed by acquisition of the Army land and completion of a full 18-hole course with a clubhouse.

The first task is just about assured, according to persons close to land transfer. A spokesman for Rep. Crane said no other bids for the Navy land are foreseen.

The parks retained architect Gill at a cost of $5,000 to develop plans for the base. This was done to present the federal government with concrete proposals for the land; a necessary step in gaining "surplus" land.

There is another aspect the government wants to know about: what is the cost and how will it be financed?

"A very round, ballpark figure for the entire 18 holes and a clubhouse would be around $1. million," Thornton said. "We're still debating about the financing. We can have revenue or general obligation bonds. Revenue bonds would have to be paid off before money (from a golf facility) could go to other things, with G.O. bonds, the money can go around while they are being paid off. Our consultants with the National Golf Federation tell us G.O. bonds have a very good record of passing. Offhand, I can't think of any that haven't passed for a golf course."

THE ARMY IS not likely to give up the Nike base without a struggle. It has been termed "vital to the air defense of the Chicago metropolitan area" by base commanders.

Questions are now being raised whether the base and armaments it commands would be effective in case of a missile attack. Its use as a National Guard depot is also coming under scrutiny from area legislators.

According to a Crane spokesman, the congressman has been making "inquiries" about the actual use of the base. He met this spring with homeowners near the base and said he "will go to bat" for a park on the site.

Sen. Adlai Stevenson III has also taken up the park district banner to acquire the land. He toured the base in May and met with residents and park officials prior to the government's decision to declare the first 13 acres surplus.

A spokesman for the senator said, "We are looking into the matter to see if the Army's claims of necessity are justified."

AMONG THE questions to be answered are whether the facility with its National Guard component could be moved to Ft. Sheridan and whether the base provides adequate protection in case of an enemy attack.

The spokesman continued, "The senator has been a long-time supporter of a regional park in the area . . . This ties in with the need for open land. In terms of open land in ratio to population, this is the most park-starved area in the nation. It is also part of an overall effort to eliminate under-utilized federal property."

Thornton placed the many correspondences back in the file and said, "We've put out $5,000 for the preliminary plans. I know we're sticking our neck out, but heck, we have to show we're serious. It's been a long, long time — 10 years. A lot of people have been working on this and now it looks like it's finally coming around."

In the area of recreation, the village plans to preserve several large open spaces in the area. Among them are the Buffalo Grove Golf Course, presently in the village, and the Arlington Country Club and Chevy Chase Country Club which are in unincorporated areas.

ILLINOIS TRAFFIC SAFETY ALERT

Drive Alert In Illinois

It's a Great Place to LIVE.

LARSON SAID once the village attracts several companies, other companies will probably follow suit.

In addition to the industrial area near the Soo Line Railroad tracks, the village also plans a much smaller industrial area on Dundee Road, west of Arlington Heights Road.

A village center is planned by the village in the vicinity of Lake-Cook, Buffalo Grove and Old McHenry roads. The area would be set aside for retail stores and professional offices, as well as a variety of public facilities. The public buildings could include municipal offices, a library, auditorium and museum.

The village is to be successful, it will have to convince potential industrial developers that it can provide the services they need, according to officials. Some of these services include utilities, such as water and fire protection, he said. The village will also have to show developers it can provide the industry with the needed labor force, officials said.

Sewage woes

Residents charge pollution coming from Weller Creek

by STEVE BROWN

A group of Des Plaines women may try to block the Metropolitan Sanitary District (MSD) from issuing any additional sewer permits for projects along Weller Creek.

The action, which is one of the tactics being considered by the Cumberland Terrace Civic Association, results from what residents have termed a serious health problem. They contend large amounts of raw sewage are being dumped into the creek upstream in Mount Prospect and other towns.

Officials from both Des Plaines and the MSD admit that the creek, which runs from near the Barrington area to the Des Plaines River, is polluted, but contend there are no short range solutions available.

DES PLAINE'S Environmental Officer Philip Lindahl said recently he has been told a number of major projects will have to be completed before the sewage problem can be reduced.

But the women, including Shelly Cerney, 209 Washington St., Des Plaines, believe something can be done and they feel city and MSD officials are dragging their feet.

"The city and the MSD has told us that there is nothing we can do to improve the situation," she said. Mrs. Cerney said combined sewage systems in Mount Prospect allow for raw sewage to be dumped into the creek during periods of heavy rains.

"I do not see why the creek has to be that dirty. 15 years ago, the water was clean and you could even fish out of it," said Lorraine Hinton, of 237 Washington.

"We would like to see the city help remove this health problem," added Nancy Anda, of 242 Washington.

THE WOMEN said City Sanitarian Marvin Martin has helped to eliminate a rat problem also bothering persons living near the creek. They said Martin has put out rat bait and traps several times.

The creek was cited as one of the dirtiest in Illinois by the state Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) several years ago and the local residents said there is little that has been done to change the problem.

City officials said they have been told by the MSD that the problems along Weller Creek will not improve substantially until several new sewage treatment plants, including the controversial O'Hare facility, are constructed and put into operation.

The civic association is also concerned about the hazard the creek represents for local children and the possibility of flooding.

"We have lost 10 feet of our backyard," said Mrs. Ollie Sloan. While the city has done some work to improve the banks of the creek, the residents said the last major channel improvements were made in 1969 and 1970 and more work needs to be done. Some work on the creek was performed more recently in Mount Prospect.

"We haven't been getting satisfactory answers to any of our questions and there seems like there should be more people concerned about this problem," Mrs. Cerney said.

CHECKING THE SEWAGE problem, three members of the Cumberland Terrace Civic Association in Des Plaines examine a section of Weller Creek which flows through their neighborhood. The group Sanitary District from allowing raw sewage to be dumped in the creek.

Burglar flees when spotted by resident

A would-be cat burglar fled the home of a Des Plaines resident early yesterday when the intended victims noticed the man inside their house, police said.

According to reports, the burglar had broken into the house of Harold Christiansen, 1731 Birch St., through a door in an attached garage which had been left unopened.

Christiansen's wife, Joan, told police she was awakened by a flashlight and the burglar fled when she called to her husband.

A set of tracks on a wet lawn in back of the house led police to believe the man fled on foot through the rear yard.

Nothing was stolen from the house, police said.

Burglars had also forced their way into the home of Roger Smith, 140 Ardmore Rd., late Friday but nothing was reported stolen, said police.

The break-in was discovered by a neighbor who told police he dropped by the house and noticed a pried bedroom window. Police said Smith was out of town when the break-in occurred.

Alvera Homuth, 1112 Margaret St., told police someone had broken into her garage late Saturday.

Nothing was reported stolen. The woman told police she noticed the break-in upon returning home from a shopping trip.

Zoners may face protest over multi-family plea

It appears the Des Plaines Zoning Board of Appeals should brace itself for another wave of citizen protest over a new request for multiple-family zoning.

Storm clouds appear to be brewing over the 1300 block of Prairie Avenue where four property owners have petitioned for a change in zoning from single-family (R-2) to multiple-family (R-5).

The requests, which ask for zoning changes at 1300, 1304 1312 and 1328 Prairie Ave., will be reviewed by the ZBA on Oct. 23.

RESIDENTS who live in the area will begin to circulate protest petitions next weekend in an effort to block the rezoning.

"We already have enough R-5 multiple-family zoning in Des Plaines and much of it is vacant, we do not need anymore," said Joseph Botte, of 560 Webford, a neighbor who is protesting the rezoning.

Botte said petitions will be circulated on Webford, Laurel and Prairie avenues.

Local attorney Kenneth Meyer, who is representing the property owners, said there are definite plans to develop only one of the four parcels.

HE SAID the building will probably be an apartment structure, but he declined to reveal any additional details of the project.

"I was initially approached by one property owner, but to rezone just one lot would have been spot zoning, so we convinced several other property owners to join us," Meyer said.

Botte complained that many persons are not interested in seeing the neighborhood turn into a high density residential area.

"There is no need for further encroachment of the multiple-family housing into the single-family neighborhoods," Botte said.

"Many of us did not buy in this area just to resell the property for the higher profit, we want to live here," he added.

BOTTE SAID there does not seem to be a proven need for the additional multiple-family housing in the area.

"Some people just want to get a higher price for their property and that does not seem like a good enough reason to allow the rezoning," Botte said.

The zoning board will hear the request at 8 p.m. in city council chambers.

Teacher contract dispute topic of meeting Wednesday

The president of the Maine Teachers Association (MTA) and Dist. 207 Supt. Richard Short are scheduled to meet tomorrow afternoon to discuss the teacher contract dispute.

MTA Pres. Dewane Barnes said Short offered to meet with him last week after the school board reaffirmed its willingness "to meet and confer in a fair and reasonable manner" with teachers.

Barnes also reported that a township-wide teachers' "march for education" is tentatively planned for 4 p.m. Oct. 17 in Des Plaines. The purpose of the march is to publicize teachers' disagreements with school boards and to emphasize the teachers' right to be heard, he said.

Cub scout pack 11 opened the 1973-74 season with a pack meeting Sept. 28, at Forest School. Cubmaster James Morley opened the meeting and the Webelos presented the colors. Bobcat pins were received by the following: Bill Ramsey, Jeff Underwood, Eric Carlson, Stephen Weaver, Richard Anstadt, Ted Kahn, Ron Trost, Mark Bush and Joe Batdorf.

Frank Gysler and Glenn Danielson received Harold Nicodem and Steven Sobczak into the Webelos den.

Randy Trost advanced into Boy Scouts and was received into Troop 12, Peter Falstad was accepted into Troop 64.

Boy Scouts from the Order of the Arrow presented a varied group of Indian dances. The parents held a short meeting, while the cubs played a few relay games.

Hot lunch prices hiked in schools

The price of hot lunches at Maine Township high schools has been raised to 53 cents, a five-cent increase from last year.

School officials attribute the price increase to higher food costs at the wholesale level. The school district will provide free lunches to students whose family incomes meet certain eligibility standards.

Information on the free lunch program is available at the school offices. All information provided on applications for the program will be held confidential.

State Rep. Schlickman tells plans to seek sixth term

by AL MESSERSCHMIDT

State Rep. Eugene Schlickman will run again.

Schlickman, R-Arlington Heights, announced yesterday he will seek a sixth term to "work for an open, truly representative house . . . to continue to speak out where others hesitate."

The Arlington Heights attorney was optimistic in his fourth district candidacy announcement, despite personal setbacks in the spring General Assembly session.

"I am proud of the battles I have fought and won, I am proud of the setbacks for they represent real challenges. To the heavy handed, low dealing of a few who seem to think that advancing their own political ambitions comes before doing the job for which they were elected."

Schlickman was unsuccessful last spring in an attempt to block the election of Rep. W. Robert Blair as House Speaker. Since then, the two have battled over legislation and political appointments. Blair recently dumped Schlickman as chairman of the legislative advisory commission to the Northeast Illinois Planning Commission.

MAINE TOWNSHIP Committeeman Floyd Fulle, Wheeling Township Committeeman Richard Coven and State Sen. John Nimrod supported his candidacy, Schlickman said.

Nimrod and Arlington Heights Mayor Jack Walsh attended the press conference yesterday in Des Plaines.

Schlickman, known for controversial support of parochialism, zoning reform and regional planning, said he will work to secure homeowner protection against shoddy home construction, for land-use planning, regional mass transit, elimination of sales tax on drugs and medicine, and legislative and election reform.

"I will not accept contributions exceeding $100 from any source, no contributions from any corporation or special interest groups," he said. "All contributions must come from individuals."

Schlickman said he will open his 1974 campaign records to the press.

Schlickman said he plans to play a vital part in choosing a speaker for the House in the spring; "I can see myself going further than I did this time," he said.

Teachers' negotiating team returns to talks

The East Maine Education Association (EMEA) and the Dist. 63 board returned to the negotiating table last night for the first time since negotiations broke down two weeks ago.

The EMEA broke off contract negotiations Sept. 25 after the Dist. 63 board refused to give a written commitment that a board member be present at all sessions.

That session was the first to include a professional negotiator hired by the school board. EMEA Pres. Henry O'Neill said teachers view the negotiator's presence as "cutting off our last real contact with the board."

O'Neill said the teachers decided to resume negotiations since the board agreed in executive session at its Sept. 18 meeting to have a board member present at all negotiations.

DIST. 63 Board Pres. Irene Luck termed the teachers' refusal to negotiate without a board member present as "a tactical move."

"We decided to have a board member present at our last board meeting — it was a moot question," she said.

In a letter to EMEA Vice Pres. Ken Howenstine, State Sup't. Michael Bakalis said his office is willing to mediate in disputes "where indicated."

Bakalis noted mediation "may not be possible" in Dist. 63 since both sides in the dispute must request third-party assistance.

Howenstine said the EMEA is willing to accept the help of a mediator, but Mrs. Luck said the board doesn't feel mediation is needed at this point.

"We're still actively trying to negotiate — we want to keep trying between the two boards," she said.

The EMEA is scheduled to take a strike vote at 3:30 p.m. Oct. 15 at the Gemini School.

Addition to mental health center offices delayed

Construction on an addition to Elk Grove-Schaumburg Township Mental Health Center offices has been delayed.

Approval of a bid for work on the four-room addition was expected to come at a meeting of the mental health center board last week, but only five of the 15 board members showed up. At least eight board members must be present before the board can take any official action.

Jordan Rosen, executive director of the mental health center, said Thursday he will personally poll board members so a bid can be approved just as soon as a few problems with the new addition can be worked out.

Rosen said Thursday it's been recommended by the addition's architect that the entire mental health facility should be electrically rewired. Rosen said he hasn't had an official estimate on the cost of such a job, but expects it to be "about $3,000." Another problem facing the mental health center board is obtaining a new lease on The Farmhouse before proceeding with construction.

"OBTAINING the lease should be no problem," according to Rosen. The mental health facility, known as The Farmhouse, is owned by Alexian Brothers Medical Center. Brother Ferdinand Leyva, director of the hospital, has already informed Rosen by letter that a new lease is being drawn up by the hospital's attorney and should be ready at any time.

Two bids were received for construction of the addition, which will allow the mental health center to hire several new counselors. Both bids were about $5,000 higher than expected. The job was originally estimated at $15,000. Both bids were just over $20,000, the low bidder being Thomas Construction Co. of Elk Grove Village who bid slightly more than $20,100. Thomas has already done remodeling work at The Farmhouse.

According to Rosen, the reason for the higher cost was due to the fact that heating and air-conditioning systems now at The Farmhouse will not accommodate the addition and will have to be replaced.

Rosen said money to make up for the higher construction cost will probably come by cutting back hiring personnel. Four new counselors were to be hired. Now, only three full-time counselors will probably be hired, according to Rosen.

IN OTHER action the board heard a report from Rosen recommending that some fees for mental health center clients be raised. Fees at the present time run from $2 to $25 per session depending on income, marital status, dependents and ability to pay. The proposed increases would average about $2 per session although the minimum fee of $2 and fees for lower income brackets would remain unchanged.

Rosen added that no one is turned away from the mental health center because of the inability to pay and most people pay less than the fee schedule prescribes.

No action was taken by the board due to the lack of a quorum. Action on the matter could come at the next meeting of the board, scheduled for Oct. 25.

Forest View homecoming: films, football and dance

Homecoming activities this week at Forest View High School will include a film festival, powder puff football game and dance exhibition.

The festivities will get under way today with the film festival in the cafeteria during lunch hours. All films are student productions.

Wednesday the school's "Town Criers" singing group will perform and there will be a tea for faculty members, foreign exchange students and new students at 3:40 p.m.

The English Department will sponsor a reader's theatre Thursday afternoon. That night, junior and senior girls will clash at 6 p.m. in a powder puff football game to be followed at 7 p.m. by a pep rally.

Friday, Ground Grenadier burgers will be on the lunch menu, made from the remains of the Elk Grove football team. Forest View will meet Elk Grove Saturday in the annual homecoming game. The Orchestras Dance Club will present an exhibition Friday afternoon.

The 1973 homecoming queen will be crowned in a student assembly scheduled for 3 p.m. Friday in the boys gym.

The big game will start at 8 p.m. at the Forest View field. The queen will be presented to the crowd at halftime.

Local man arrested on assault charge

Police arrested a man after he allegedly demanded money from a local man and threatened the man and his family.

According to reports, Dale Trahan, 21, of 1706 Ash St. was charged with assault Friday night after police said he threatened Robert Jewell, 1886 Ash St.

Jewell told police he heard someone banging on his front door demanding money and making threatening remarks. Jewell then called police, giving them a description of the man, who according to reports had no weapon.

Police stopped Trahan about five minutes later walking near Mannheim Road west of Ash Street, a short distance from his home.

Jewell later identified Trahan as the assailant when police brought the suspect to his home.

Trahan was released on $100 bond and has been scheduled to appear in Des Plaines branch of Cook County Circuit Court Nov. 8.

Village seeks to end confusion over mental health agency and Community Service

by FRED GACA
First of a series

Elk Grove Village created Elk Grove Village Community Service.

Community Service created the Elk Grove-Schaumburg Townships Mental Health Center.

Creation of the mental health center resulted in confusion over the two agencies — how funds were to be channeled, what facilities would be used and what services would be provided.

For several months, the two agencies were closely interwoven. They shared the same executive director, the boards of directors shared common members, use of facilities was not clearly defined and channels of funding were combined.

THE ELK GROVE Village Board of Trustees has acted to define the roles in relationship to the village.

Much of the confusion and problems involving Community Service and the mental health center results from the way the organizations came into existence.

Community Service began in the mid-1960s as a three-year pilot program jointly operated by Elk Grove Village and the YMCA to seek out social problems, especially those of the youths.

In 1969, the YMCA discontinued its support and the director, a YMCA employee, left.

The village decided to continue Community Service, funding the program as a regular village agency. Community Service employees were village employees and the village provided accounting and other services for the agency.

Community Service was governed by a 15-member board of directors. They were residents of the village and were appointed by the village president with concurrence of the trustees.

THE PERIOD 1969-71 was a turbulent one for Community Service. The new director, Thomas Smith, a former psychologist for School Dist. 59, turned out to be a controversial choice for the job. Almost from the day he started, Smith's actions and comments aroused the displeasure of the village board and residents.

At one point, the village considered abolishing the Community Service Board and assuming direct control of the agency. On another occasion, village officials talked of stopping all funding for Community Service.

In late 1970, Smith resigned. Several months later, Jordan Rosen, the present director for both Community Service and the mental health center, was hired. Rosen ended much of the tension between Community Service and the village board.

Community Service's offices, which had been shuffled around several locations in the village, were established at "The Farmhouse," an old, white farmhouse at 700 Bluestemfield Rd. The building and land are owned by Alexian Brothers Medical Center which offered the use of the facilities to the agency.

COMMUNITY SERVICE gradually evolved into more than a youth social agency.

The agency gradually evolved into a counseling organization, treating not only young people, but their parents and eventually any village adult who sought help.

In December, 1970, Community Service was reorganized as a not-for-profit corporation. The incorporation enabled the agency to receive funds from various charity organizations, in addition to village funds, to provide counseling services.

Prior to 1972, Elk Grove, Schaumburg, Palatine and Wheeling townships were a mental health district receiving mental health services from the Northwest Mental Health Association in Arlington Heights. In 1972, the area was split.

Community Service applied for and received a grant from the Illinois Department of Mental Health to establish a mental health center serving Elk Grove and Schaumburg townships.

With the establishment of the mental health center, the confusion set in. Community Service had become primarily a counseling service for the residents of the village. The mental health center assumed the counseling services, but for residents of the two townships, not just Elk Grove Village.

COMMUNITY SERVICE was funded primarily by village money. The mental health center is eligible for funding by the state mental health department, contributions from the township governments, and municipalities within the townships and various charitable organizations.

The Farmhouse, which had been used for Community Service counseling programs and was remodeled using village funds became the main facility for the mental health center.

Rosen was the executive director for both agencies.

Community Service, which had become almost exclusively a counseling agency, was left with few ongoing programs.

Boards of directors meetings for Community Service and the mental health center were confusing members who had trouble deciding which issues belonged to Community Service, which belonged to the mental health center and which belonged to both.

The Elk Grove Village board of trustees became disturbed over the confusion. Board members felt the village had "lost" its agency, Community Service, to the mental health center. They did not like the idea of the mental health center taking over many of the duties previously associated with Community Service because the village had no direct control over the mental health center as it did over Community Service.

THE VILLAGE BOARD finally issued directions to Community Service and the mental health center on what their roles were to be.

By January, the Community Service Board and mental health center board are to be distinct, with no common membership. The Community Service board would consist of village residents only. This board would advise the village of any actions in the field of social problems.

The village would no longer contribute funds directly to the mental health center, except on the recommendation of the Community Service Board.

The village board wants Community Service to continue as a village agency serving village residents to solve village problems.

Tomorrow: The separation of the agencies — will it put an end to the confusion.

FOOTBALL HEROINE? Eight-year-old Ellen Weber of Elk Grove Village just missed finishing third in her division in local Punt, Pass and Kick football competition. If she had won, she would have been the first girl ever to do so in the history of the event.

$2,000 in office equipment stolen

The offices of the National Material Corp., 2525 Arthur Ave., were burglarized Saturday night, according to Elk Grove Village police.

Taken in the burglary were typewriters and other office machines with a total value of about $2,000. According to police, no sign of forced entry was found, but three windows in the office were open.

Grid standout 4 feet tall— 'he's' a 'she'

by BOB GALLAS

On an overstuffed sofa, Ellen Weber doesn't make much of an impression. Not many 4-foot, 65-pound little girls do. On the football field — that's another story.

It all started when Ellen was little and couldn't leave the block. Since there were only boys to play with, she played their game — football. Her career as a football player was climaxed recently when she finished fourth against 12 other 8-year-olds — in punt, pass and kick competition for Elk Grove Village youths.

With three older brothers, Ellen always had lots of coaching, especially from her 18-year-old brother Bill, who played on last year's undefeated Elk Grove High School football team. Nevertheless, it did come as surprising news at the Weber household when Ellen came home from school one day with an entry blank for the punt, pass and kick competition.

"I didn't think she'd do that well," said Ellen's mother, Elizabeth Weber. "But she wanted to enter and I said OK."

BEING THE only female entry in the Elk Grove Village competition did pose a few problems. Her short, blond hair and the long hair some boys wear these days didn't help. "A few boys came up to me and asked me if I was a girl," said Ellen. "After I told them yes, they'd go back to their friends and I could hear them whispering, 'yep, she's a girl all right.'"

Most of the neighborhood games are played in a field behind the Weber home. "Ellen's not allowed to play tackle football," said Mrs. Weber. "I do sometimes." Ellen interjected while staring at the floor. "I know, I know," said Mrs. Weber with a touch of motherly exasperation.

Ellen, a third-grader at Mark Hopkins school in Elk Grove Village, says she doesn't like playing with girls, but admits she plays with dolls "sometimes." Priority, however, is given to neighborhood football, baseball and basketball games and an occasional snowfight in the winter.

AN AVID sports fan, she also likes to watch football on television, especially when the Green Bay Packers are on. She's not sure whether women should be allowed to play pro football. "Maybe if they're good like me," said Ellen without a trace of conceit.

Ellen hopes to enter the punt, pass and kick competition next year a little better prepared than she was this year. According to Ellen, she only got to practice the day before the event.

Ellen said the fact that she was the only girl in the contest didn't bother her, but she hopes they'll be ready for her next year, so she won't have the same problems she had this year. "When it was my turn, the man said, 'go ahead, son,'" said Ellen.

Village blood goal

Annual goal: 900 units
Already donated: 378 units

A special village blood drive will be Saturday to start donations for the fourth quarter. Blood may be donated at the headquarters fire station, next to the village hall, 901 Wellington Ave. For appointments to donate blood, call Trustee Nanci Vanderweel at 439-3900.

Elk Grove Village requires 900 units of blood donated yearly in order to guarantee free blood replacement for all residents. If the village fails to meet the quota, it could be dropped from the replacement program.

Bloodhounds being trained

by JOHN MAES

Chicago police are training three new rookies for investigative work as super sleuths.

But the rookies are not policemen — they are police bloodhounds recently acquired for the department's canine training center at 320 Touhy Ave., Des Plaines.

The hounds — Darling, 6; Lady and Big Red, both 10 months — are being integrated into what was previously an all-German Shepherd outfit, according to Lt. Robert O'Toole, supervisor of the dog training unit.

"The state penal farm at Vandalia is phasing the dogs out of their program so we took them," O'Toole said.

The dogs will be used for anything from sniffing out criminals to searching buildings and tracking down lost children, according to O'Toole.

O'TOOLE SAID the use of bloodhounds is a test program to see how they will perform as police dogs. "If it's determined the hounds are giving us something the shepherds don't, they'll be maintained on a regular basis."

During the training at the Des Plaines school, the dogs will be oriented to the tasks of big city sniffing. "These dogs are basically farm-oriented," O'Toole said. "There's a big difference in the types of scents a police dog will encounter in the city as opposed to a farm area so they'll have to be reoriented."

At the center, police put the dogs through an obstacle course consisting of a series of jumps, climbs and platforms designed to train the dogs in various sniffing and tracking techniques.

Police dogs are used on patrols in high-crime areas in Chicago on a regular basis where the sniffing and tracking abilities of a dog are most needed by police.

O'TOOLE MENTIONED certain Chicago parks, areas in the loop, and CTA elevated train platforms "where crime patterns develop" as places where the dogs are used most frequently.

The bloodhounds will probably not be used on routine patrols, O'Toole said but will be saved for special tracking assignments.

"Bloodhounds are excellent sniffers, but just don't have the natural protective instinct towards their handlers that German Shepherds do."

During training, each dog is handled and cared for exclusively by a single officer assigned to the dog. When not training at the center, the dogs remain at home with their handler.

German Shepherds become protective of their handlers whereas the bloodhounds are not that "aggressive," he said.

"Police dogs seem to enjoy their work too," O'Toole said. "They always seem to be anxious to go with their officer." The average police dog sees about eight to 10 years of service on the 47-dog unit, he said.

Local chambers may form group

A lobby to represent Northwest suburban business may be organizing in the form of local united chambers of commerce.

The Rolling Meadows Chamber of Commerce's policy committee has met recently with a number of area chamber representatives, including Arlington Heights, Elk Grove Village, Palatine, and Mount Prospect to discuss areas of mutual cooperation.

Rolling Meadows Chamber director Harry O'Brien predicted the group may expand soon to include 12 to 15 chambers which could eventually become a lobby for suburban business.

"Rolling Meadows has kind of volunteered to direct this," O'Brien said. He said the city chamber is keeping records of meeting dates and discussions for the group.

If organized formally, O'Brien said the group could become an effective lobby for business interests. The group could take stands on pending business-related legislation in the state General Assembly with the aim of benefiting local merchants and industry, O'Brien said.

He described the idea of the lobby as still in a very preliminary stage, but said the plan as well as other means of chamber cooperation will be discussed with a number of surrounding community chambers.

Girl, 14, found unconscious in ditch; probe on

Schaumburg police are investigating circumstances surrounding the discovery early yesterday of an unconscious teenager in a ditch in unincorporated Cook County southeast of village limits.

Positive identification of the 14-year-old girl was made by her mother later yesterday at Alexian Brothers Medical Center, Elk Grove Village, where she had been taken for treatment by Schaumburg Fire Department ambulance.

She had been missing from home since approximately 8 p.m. Sunday.

The girl was discovered several blocks from her home after a neighbor called police about 8 a.m. to report seeing a body lying in a ditch behind his property.

Police who arrived on the scene were unable to detect a pulse though a fireman later detected signs of life.

Hospital officials described the girl in fair condition yesterday and said she is being treated for acute psychotic reaction with secondary anxiety depression.

Schlickman plans to campaign for state seat again

by AL MESSERSCHMIDT

State Rep. Eugene Schlickman will run again.

Schlickman, R-Arlington Heights, announced yesterday he will seek a sixth term to "work for an open, truly representative house... to continue to speak out where others hesitate."

The Arlington Heights attorney was optimistic in his fourth district candidacy announcement, despite personal setbacks in the spring General Assembly session.

"I am proud of the battles I have fought and won, I am proud of the setbacks for they represent real challenges to the heavy handed, low dealing of a few who seem to think that advancing their own political ambitions comes before doing the job for which they were elected."

Schlickman was unsuccessful last spring in an attempt to block the election of Rep. W. Robert Blair as House Speaker. Since then, the two have battled over legislation and political appointments. Blair recently dumped Schlickman as chairman of the legislative advisory commission to the Northeast Illinois Planning Commission.

MAINE TOWNSHIP Committeeman Floyd Fulle, Wheeling Township Committeeman Richard Cowen and State Sen. John Nimrod supported his candidacy, Schlickman said.

Nimrod and Arlington Heights Mayor Jack Walsh attended the press conference yesterday in Des Plaines.

Schlickman, known for controversial support of parochialism, zoning reform and regional planning, said he will work to secure homeowner protection against shoddy home construction, for land-use planning, regional mass transit, elimination of sales tax on drugs and medicine, and legislative and election reform.

"I will not accept contributions exceeding $100 from any source, no contributions from any corporation or special interest groups," he said. "All contributions must come from individuals."

Schlickman said he will open his 1974 campaign records to the press.

Schlickman said he plans to play a vital part in choosing a speaker for the House in the spring; "I can see myself going further than I did this time," he said.

Conant boosters club meeting Tuesday

The Conant High School boosters club will meet today at 8 p.m. in the school cafeteria.

Faculty sponsors of the drama, band, girls athletics and other all-school clubs and activities will be present to answer questions from parents.

The meeting will be conducted by Edward Oslance, president. Membership in the boosters club is open to all residents of the high school district and anyone interested in joining is encouraged to attend the meeting.

School board wrapup

Refusal to pay fees —no report card?

John Emma told the Schaumburg Township Dist. 54 School Board that they were creating a psychological problem for his children and punishing him by withholding report cards for objecting to pay a book fee.

"Who are you disciplining? Me or my child?" the Schaumburg man asked at last Thursday's meeting.

"This is a harmful action and could damage" his children's personalities, Emma maintains. "I object to paying a book fee. I haven't paid for five years and don't plan on starting now."

Emma said the district can't prove to him that each penny paid in book fees is used directly to purchase or mend books. "If they could, I'd pay the money," he added.

HE SAYS board members and administrators told him all funds are pooled together to pay for everything.

"Why I could be paying for salaries or something," he said.

Supt. Wayne Schaible said the district does collect a book fee to defray expenses and will continue to do so. He told Emma that in hardship cases the fee is waived.

Emma said he plans to sue the district if his children do not receive a report card to take home at the next marking period.

"They are making my kid different and I don't think it's fair," he complained.

Students study the heart

Sixth-graders in 14 Schaumburg Township Dist. 54 schools will take part in an in-depth study of the heart and circulatory system.

The program is based on a curriculum provided by the Heart Association of North Cook County. It was developed and expanded by Hannah Wilson, Dist. 54 director of health services, and teachers who taught the program at Dirksen and Collins schools last year.

PARTICIPATING schools this year include Dirksen, Collins, Hale, Blackhawk, Dooly, Schaumburg, Fox, Eisenhower, Hillcrest, Fairview, Churchill, Lakeview, Hanover and McArthur.

Carl Seltzer, curriculum director said teachers, students and parents expressed a keen interest in the program last year.

Students learned to use a stethoscope and sphygmometer to test their own blood pressure. They also did their own blood typing and conducted individual projects on prevention of heart disease.

Family involvement was overwhelming, said Seltzer who recommended the proposal adapted by the board.

In the program models of the heart are used together with blood testing kits and typing kits. Films and lectures by a cardiologist, nurse and a member of the Red Cross are part of the course.

It will cost $4,549 to purchase materials and pay costs of the program. The Heart Association will give the district $615 worth of materials and train teachers.

Attitude survey is set

A community attitude survey will be taken in Schaumburg Township School Dist. 54 within the next few months.

The survey, to be conducted by Dr. Harold Collins of Northern Illinois University, is to determine the attitudes of residents on such things as educational programs, facilities, lunch programs, teaching staff and transportation. Up to $7,500 has been allocated to cover its cost.

Board member Gordon Thoren, chairman of the community relations committee, recommended the survey. He said it will be used along with other sources to help plot the future operation of the district.

The board members and community relations committee will meet Nov. 8 to discuss it further.

Local group to name unit to check county probes

The Elk Grove Village Association of Industry and Commerce will form a special committee tonight to investigate Cook County inspections of village factories.

Stan Klyber, association officer, said the committee is to determine why the county is making the investigations. Tonight's meeting is the regular one of the association board.

Local industries have been advised by the association to allow the county inspectors to enter the plant and inspect. The association, however, stated the industries should not pay any bill for the inspections, until a review of the legality of the inspections is made.

The county has been submitting bills to the firms for the inspections. The bills are based on the size of the firm and the amount of inspection done.

Klyber said he has only contacted the county to get a copy of the inspection ordinances. He said he called three times and was told the ordinances were still at the printers. A copy of the ordinances was finally obtained from the state Chamber of Commerce.

Library vote set for Nov. 6 by trustees

Voters will go to the polls on Nov. 6 to determine the fate of a $1.3 million building referendum for a new Palatine public library.

The referendum date was officially set by the Palatine Village Board last night in an ordinance calling for the vote and establishing the polling places.

The board also offered its help to the library board in working for the passage of the referendum.

If successful the referendum would increase the tax rate in Palatine by 6.9 cents per $100 of assessed valuation. For the average homeowner with a house assessed at $11,515 this would mean an increase of $7.95 per year, less than a 1 per cent hike in the total tax bill.

THE PROPOSED library would be constructed on a 1.67 acre site at Benton Street and Northwest Highway. The site was purchased by the library board in January for $116,000 out of a special fund.

Preliminary architectural drawings call for a two-story structure built to the slope contour of the land. Only 1 1/4 stories would be visible from Benton Street. But both stories would be visible from the rear of the building where parking is planned on commercial property adjacent to the west side of the site.

The drawings outline a 32,000 square-foot structure costing an estimated $33 per square foot. The main level would contain children's and adult reading rooms, administrative offices and a lobby.

The lower level would contain meeting and conference rooms, a processing room, bookmobile garage and kitchen. Half of the lower level, 1,000 square feet, will be left unfinished in the initial construction. This will provide space for future expansion.

The long-range plans are to move the children's library to the lower level and use the entire main level for adult services.

IF APPROVED CONSTRUCTION could start this spring with occupancy scheduled for early 1975.

The proposed library will be positioned on the site so there is enough room for a future addition on the north end of the building.

Plans to replace the current library facility at 149 N. Brockway have been in the planning stages for several years.

In 1969 voters defeated a $2.28 million referendum to purchase a site and construct a new library.

The following year a $235,000 referendum to purchase a site was also defeated.

Garbagemen vote next week on new 1-year contract

Garbagemen from Browning-Ferris Industries of Illinois Inc. will vote next week on a tentative one-year contract with the Harrington scavenger service.

Representatives of the Chicago and Suburban Refuse Disposal Association, the bargaining agent for the firm, and Local 705 of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, which represents the workers, agreed upon the tentative contract during negotiations Friday night.

Frank Grady, a union official, confirmed yesterday that the 75 garbagemen will vote on whether to accept the contract next Monday night, but refused to discuss the details of the contract.

The extent of raises and benefits will determine whether residents of the six Northwest suburbs served by Browning-Ferris can expect an increase in their scavenger rates.

The garbagemen had opened negotiations two months ago seeking a $1 an hour raise over their present wages of $5.95 an hour.

Other contract issues include benefits and working conditions.

The garbagemen had gone out on a wildcat strike last Monday, when the previous contract expired, but returned to work on Tuesday. The new contract will be retroactive to Oct. 1.

Communities served by Browning-Ferris are Hoffman Estates, Inverness, Mount Prospect, Palatine and parts of Prospect Heights and Schaumburg.

TEACHERS IN Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist. 15, who started the school year without a new salary schedule, marched on the district administration building last night "to support their negotiators."

according to John Sherman, head of the Classroom Teachers' Council which represents more than 90 per cent of the Dist. 15 teachers. Teacher and school board negotiators met last night for the sixth time since last May in an effort to agree on this year's salaries.

Teachers support negotiators in march

About 350 teachers marched to the Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist. 15 administration building during salary talks last night.

"We're just supporting our negotiating team," said one teacher. Some of the teachers carried signs with either the names of different schools or brief statements such as "Professional pay for professionals." Most were empty-handed.

The teachers, who started this school year without a new wage contract, marched from Pleasant Hill School, 434 W. Illinois, to the administration building, 505 S. Quentin, keeping to the side of the road to avoid traffic.

Once at the building, they lined up along the driveway leading from the back parking lot to the front door and clapped as their negotiators walked past them.

Members of the board negotiating team entered through a side door, avoiding the driveway. Board president Walt Sundling refused to comment on the demonstration, but board member Howard Meadows said "This does not mean anything to us. I have no reaction."

TEACHERS AND the school board have been negotiating 1973-74 salaries

since last May. Talks were temporarily suspended over the summer so teachers could study the financial situation of the district.

At the last negotiating session two weeks ago teachers were asking for a total increase of $336,790 over last year's salary package. No figures on how this amount would be distributed are available. The board's latest offer was about $152,000 under the teacher demand.

Until a negotiated settlement is reached, teachers will be receiving the same salaries they received last year. Sundling has said that any settlement would be retroactive to the beginning of the school year.

Teacher negotiators earlier this year refused a temporary 6 per cent pay raise, saying they preferred to settle salaries in one package, according to George Sherman head of the Classroom Teachers' Council, which represents more than 90 per cent of the teachers.

The Nike Site

Slowly, the park district is gaining missile site land for public use

by JOE SWICKARD
A News Analysis

The scoreboard reads: Arlington Heights Park District 13, U.S. Army 73 and undecided 52.

The above breakdown represents the acres held by the contesting parties in the struggle for control of the Arlington Heights Nike Base on Central Road. The park district hopes to shut out the Army in the future, but the fight is far from finished.

Last week the parks gained some hope in adding 52 acres to their total with the announcement by Rep. Philip M. Crane, R-12th, that the Defense Department no longer needs that parcel of land for Navy housing. The parks still must wait 30 to 90 days for the General Services Administration to poll other federal agencies to determine if any of them want the land.

The sides have been drawn up for use of the land. On one side is the Army maintaining the missile base is necessary to defend Chicago from an enemy attack. The Army also uses the site for National Guard maneuvers. The other side comprises the park district, area homeowners, a congressman and U.S. Senators.

THE ARMY FACILITY has had a checkered career. Should the parks eventually get the land, it will have served as a prison camp, an airfield, a trailer park, a missile base, an equipment depot for the Illinois National Guard and finally a golf course.

Thomas Thornton, park district director, has a six-inch-thick file, dating back

10 years, on efforts to acquire the land for a park.

"The first letter is dated Nov. 1, 1967, to U.S. Sen. Paul Douglas. We were asking about the site then. We had heard 100 acres of it was going to be declared surplus, so we included development of it in the 1964 referendum. Well, it wasn't surplus after all, so we had to change the referendum around," Thornton said of his first attempt to get part of the 137-acre site.

To Thornton, and park officials, the Nike base is an open plum in the midst of rapid urban and suburban sprawl. It is, according to him, one of the last big land parcels the district could acquire at a minimum of monetary outlay.

"Open land is needed in this growth area. We have about 350 acres of open land for 70,000 residents and the minimum ratio is 10 acres per 1,000 people. So you can see, we're in bad shape. Even with the entire base, we'd still be well below that standard," he said.

THE PARKS SCORED their first victory in improving the ratio in August when 13 acres of the base were deeded to the district. The land, across from Northwest Community Hospital, was outside the perimeter fence of the base.

Palatine Township Auditors unanimously agreed last night to use revenue sharing money to help fund the Countryside Center for the Handicapped, Headstart program for needy preschoolers, and the Crossroads Clinic for testing and detecting venereal disease in teenagers.

Township revenue funds promised to nine different agencies to date total $82,500. Revenue sharing is a federal program to distribute part of the U.S. government's income to state and local governments.

Countryside center will receive up to $4,500 to support rehabilitation workshops for an estimated eight handicapped adults from Palatine Township.

The township's largest allocation went to the Headstart program. Fifteen Palatine township children are already in the Schaumburg-based program. An additional 15 township preschoolers will be able to join the program with the township's $13,500 allocation.

"We could open a center in Palatine Township within 30 to 45 days," said Headstart spokesman Charles Joly.

THE HEADSTART program for Palatine Township preschoolers will be moved from Schaumburg to Palatine Township when the expanded program begins.

One of the township's most controversial requests, to fund the venereal disease detection clinic for teens, received approval for up to $5,000 on a one-time basis.

The Crossroads representatives met with no opposition when their request was approved last night. Statistics from the clinic in the past three months were detailed by clinic coordinator Barbara Michelin.

"We have seen 250 youths in the first five months. We've seen 411 youths in the last three months," Miss Michelin said.

THE PROGRAM began expanding in early January. According to Miss Michelin clinic doctors have seen 111 youths requesting venereal disease tests, 54 pregnancies, 34 post-abortion cases, 41 infections diagnosed as not venereal diseases.

Centner showdown postponed

The showdown between ousted Palatine Police Chief Robert H. Centner and village trustees has been postponed to Oct. 27.

The public hearing, which will be conducted by the Palatine Fire and Police Commission in village hall, had tentatively been set for Saturday. But attorneys for both sides have been unable to meet and discuss hearing details in recent weeks.

Now, John D. Hayes, Centner's attorney, and special village attorney Jack Siegel are scheduled to meet Friday. Palatine Village Pres. Wendell Jones said yesterday that formal charges against Centner will be presented after that meeting.

Centner, Palatine's police chief for 11 years, was forced to resign in June after two weeks of pressure from Republican majority village trustees.

The former chief is currently a lieutenant on the Palatine force, retaining his chief's salary of $19,200.

CONTROVERSY over the board's handling of Centner's removal caused a deep rift between Republican trustees and former Village Mgr. Berton Braun. Braun resigned in August to take a manager post in south western Wood Dale.

Strong public support for a hearing for Centner peaked in August. Jones, who had staunchly opposed such a public hearing, bowed to public pressure when more than 3,000 signatures were gathered in a massive petition drive requesting the hearing.

Centner is unlikely to be reinstated as an outcome of the hearing. Republican trustees, who supported Centner's removal, have a 5-2 majority on the village board, the only body empowered to hire and fire the police chief.

"I'm only going to this hearing for the petitioners," Centner said yesterday. He would not comment on the hearing itself.

Charges presented by village trustees are expected to follow the line of a June administrative review of Centner. At that quizzing, the chief was accused of inadequate early morning patrols of taverns, surveillance for overweight trucks, drug control and personnel policies.

Diane Jensen dissents

Hoffman finally approves Westbury project plans

Over the strenuous objections of one trustee, the proposed development plan for Westbury was approved by the Hoffman Estates village board last night.

Trustee Diane Jensen termed the plan for 4,472 residential units on 497 acres "terrible," and said the board was not voting on the plan but on who would pay the cost of multiple lawsuits focusing on it.

The site, along both sides of Palatine Road in Palatine Township, is to include 400 single-family homes; 4,000 apartments, townhouses and condominiums, and two commercial areas.

The board voted only after an hour-long executive session in which last-minute negotiations were concluded. Although the village has been negotiating just slightly more than a year with Meridian Housing Corp., the planned developer, bargaining continued until 10:30 p.m. last night.

The final points to be decided were parking and fence screening for the mid-rise apartment area. The village wanted 2½ parking spaces per housing unit. Meridian had agreed to provide two. The final settlement provides 2½.

HOFFMAN ESTATES agreed to grant unspecified variations to its fence ordinance provision for screening between commercial areas and apartment sections. Village Atty. Edward Hofert noted Meridian is providing more open space between the two types of development than the fence ordinance requires.

In opposing the Westbury project, Mrs. Jensen related the history of the property, formerly known as Howie-in-the-Hills, describing it as "riddled with hindsight, but not too much foresight." She noted there are arguments on both sides of the proposal, but pointed out her objections. The marshy land conditions will be expensive to correct, and "when it comes to money, developers don't like to spend it," she said. She noted the property covers only 75 acres more than Moon Lake Village subdivision, but will house residents equal in number to half the current population of Hoffman Estates.

Mid-rise structures will be about 500 feet from the Winston Knolls single-family home subdivision, she said. Arguments that the "buyer should beware," either in the project or near it, are "nothing but a copout," she concluded.

Trustee Melvin Timmons, who lives in Winston Knolls, said he shares some of Mrs. Jensen's feelings, but would accept committee recommendations. Only Mrs. Jensen voted against the plan.

Hofert is to report agreement to the plan by the village before Chief U.S. District Court Judge Edwin Robson at 2 p.m. today. The settlement will not be final until Meridian deposits the $5.6 million purchase price for the property and sufficient funds to finance other provisions of the settlement. Preparation of legal documents may take 90 days, Hofert has said.

Settlement of the zoning in Meridian's plan brings to an end lawsuits totaling roughly $1.5 million against the village over its involvement in obtaining special assessments to finance public improvements on the property.

10-year fight to claim Nike lands for public

planned for the site, but the district took the advice of David Gill, a golf course architect, and left the land in "passive use." The plans were scrapped in favor of waiting for the Navy land and eventually the Army acreage.

"Why a golf course? Well, it's the best possible use for the land. There is no need for more picnicking areas — it's not suitable for that anyway," Thornton said.

According to him, a golf course on the land represents the best use because: 1. Golf courses are good revenue-producers. 2. The land could be used for winter recreation. 3. Storm water basins could be incorporated into the course to alleviate flooding in the village.

"We have found golf courses to be very good revenue-producers. We checked all around the area, and we don't know of any that aren't a success," Thornton said.

THORNTON'S timetable calls for acquiring the Navy land from GSA around the first of the year, construction of a nine-hole course, followed by acquisition of the Army land and completion of a full 18-hole course with a clubhouse.

The first task is just about assured, according to persons close to land transfer. A spokesman for Rep. Crane said no other bids for the Navy land are foreseen.

The parks retained architect Gill at a cost of $5,000 to develop plans for the base. This was done to present the federal government with concrete proposals for the land; a necessary step in gaining "surplus" land.

There is another aspect the government wants to know about: what is the cost and how will it be financed?

"A very round, ballpark figure for the entire 18 holes and a clubhouse would be around $1 million," Thornton said. "We're still debating about the financing. We can have revenue or general obligation bonds. Revenue bonds would have to be paid off before money (from a golf facility) could go to other things, with G.O. bonds, the money can go around while they are being paid off. Our consultants with the National Golf Federation tell us G.O. bonds have a very good record of passing. Offhand, I can't think of any that haven't passed for a golf course."

THE ARMY IS not likely to give up the Nike base without a struggle. It has been termed "vital to the air defense of the Chicago metropolitan area" by base commanders.

Questions are now being raised whether the base and armaments it commands would be effective in case of a missile attack. Its use as a National Guard depot is also coming under scrutiny from area legislators.

According to a Crane spokesman, the congressman has been making "inquiries" about the actual use of the base. He met this spring with homeowners near the base and said he "will go to bat" for a park on the site.

Sen. Adlai Stevenson III has also taken up the park district banner to acquire the land. He toured the base in May and met with residents and park officials prior to the government's decision to declare the first 13 acres surplus.

A spokesman for the senator said, "We are looking into the matter to see if the Army's claims of necessity are justified."

AMONG THE questions to be answered are whether the facility with its National Guard component could be moved to Ft. Sheridan and whether the base provides adequate protection in case of an enemy attack.

Rolling Meadows Chamber director Harry O'Brien predicted the group may expand soon to include 12 to 15 chambers which could eventually become a lobby for suburban business.

"Rolling Meadows has kind of volunteered to direct this," O'Brien said. He said the city chamber is keeping records of meeting dates and discussions for the group.

If organized formally, O'Brien said the

State Rep. Schlickman tells plans to seek sixth term

by AL MESSERSCHMIDT

State Rep. Eugene Schlickman will run again.

Schlickman, R-Arlington Heights, announced yesterday he will seek a sixth term to "work for an open, truly representative house . . . to continue to speak out where others hesitate."

The Arlington Heights attorney was optimistic in his fourth district candidacy announcement, despite personal setbacks in the spring General Assembly session.

"I am proud of the battles I have fought and won. I am proud of the setbacks for they represent real challenges to the heavily handed, low dealing of a few who seem to think that advancing their own political ambitions comes before doing the job for which they were elected."

Palatine VIP Club plans paper drive

The Palatine High School VIP (Very Interested Parents) Club will sponsor the first paper drive of the year Saturday.

Newspapers will be collected in trailers near the high school, at 150 E. Wood Street, from 8:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. Papers placed in bundles at the curb within the Palatine High School attendance area will also be picked up.

Proceeds from the drive will be used to help pay for the baseball team's pitching machine.

group could become an effective lobby for business interests. The group could take stands on pending business-related legislation in the state General Assembly with the aim of benefiting local merchants and industry, O'Brien said.

He described the idea of the lobby as still in a very preliminary stage, but said the plan as well as other means of chamber cooperation will be discussed with a number of surrounding community chambers.

PALATINE

Recycling drive Saturday

Glass, cans and newspapers can be dropped off at the new Palatine recycling center on N. Smith Street at Northwest Highway, Saturday from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Members of Girl Scout Cadette Troop 80 will assist with the recycling Saturday. Bottles should be washed and all metal and plastic removed; cans should be washed and flattened and any labels removed; and newspapers should be either tied in bundles or placed in grocery sacks.

The new recycling center will be open the second and fourth Saturday of every month and will be staffed by volunteers from various community organizations.

Library speakers file

Friends of the Palatine Library are preparing a Speakers Bureau resource file for use by community groups and programs. Area residents may volunteer to be included in the file by contacting the library, 358-5881 and requesting a resource file registration card. The bureau is designed to include people with special talents or knowledge who are willing to speak before local groups.

Church sets paper drive

The Fellowship Group of the Community Church of Rolling Meadows, 2720 Kirchoff Rd., will hold a paper drive from 9:30 a.m. to 2 p.m. Oct. 13. To participate, call 255-5510.

PTA notes

The Jane Addams School PTA will sponsor its annual fun fair from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. in the school gym, 1020 Sayles Dr., Palatine, Oct. 13.

The fair features games, contests, prizes and refreshments.

The Hunting Ridge School PTA will hold a taffy apple sale from noon to 1 p.m. Oct. 30, in the school's front hall, 1105 Illinois, Palatine. Cost is 20 cents per apple.

Commuter station at Park has doubled its business

Use of the new commuter station at Arlington Park Race Track has doubled in the one month the depot has been open, a Chicago and North Western Ry. spokesman said yesterday.

An average of 530 passengers are now boarding commuter trains at Arlington Park, compared to about 275 people during the first week the station opened Sept. 1.

At the current passenger level, the railroad says it is projecting additionally yearly revenues in excess of $100,000.

Joseph Marren, assistant director of public affairs for the North Western, said the ridership was "larger than we had hoped for" for this time of year.

More than 300 cars are now parking in the lot adjacent to the Arlington Park station. There is room for 800 cars.

Use of the Arlington Park stop has eased slightly congestion at the Arlington Heights depot, the largest suburban commuter station in the Chicago area.

SALES OF monthly commuter passes for the Arlington Heights station dropped

103, from 3,022 to 2,899, between September and October. Monthly ticket sales dropped in Palatine from 1,767 to 1,722, according to Marren.

At Arlington Park, monthly passes jumped from 0 to 412.

The race track stop was the first new commuter station to be opened on the Chicago and North Western commuter lines since 1925, Marren said.

The depot, built by the Village of Arlington Heights at a cost of $100,000, was contemplated in the 1969 annexation agreement between Arlington Park and the village.

Over $300,000 was spent on the entire facility, with the railroad paying for all track and platform work and the race track meeting the expenses of parking and fencing.

Rossiter Lake may become parks' swimming, rec area

Rossiter Lake in Palatine may someday become a swimming and sailing area for the Salt Creek Park District.

Land around Rossiter Lake in the Winston Park subdivision in Palatine will eventually be turned over for recreational development to the Salt Creek Park District upon completion of the Upper Salt Creek Watershed program. A preliminary inspection of the lake site has already indicated the area could be used for water recreation, park district Director Jim DeVos said.

An inspection of the lake and its surrounding area was made two weeks ago by a representative from the University of Illinois recreation department, DeVos said. He said the representative described the site as "exceptionally good" and said it could be used for swimming, sailing, and other water sports.

DeVos said tests of the water will begin soon and will continue regularly so that the quality of the water at different times of the year can be charted.

Open land around the lake is also being looked at by the district as a possible site for future building, which may include a swimming pool and recreational building.

"I don't think it's that far away," DeVos said of use of the Rossiter Lake area. "I think the board will act soon to propose a referendum (for a swimming pool). I think they are very serious about going to a referendum."

DeVos predicted passage of a referendum soon could mean completion of a swimming pool for the district within three to five years. "I think the residents will vote for it," he added.

Thrift art poster contest under way

Posters on thrift are being accepted at Palatine Savings and Loan Association, 100 W. Palatine Rd., for the sixth annual thrift art poster contest.

This year's theme is "People Who Save Live Better." Area students have until Oct. 30 to enter their posters, designed with paints, pen, pencil or crayon.

Student entries will be judged in the following age levels: high school, grades 7-8, grades 5-6 and grades 3-4. Only youths in these grades are eligible.

Official entry blanks are available at Palatine Savings and Loan, or by calling 359-4900. Posters will be displayed Oct. 23-30. Prizes will be awarded to winning entries, which will be eligible for a Chicago-area competition.

Local chambers may form group

A lobby to represent Northwest suburban business may be organizing in the form of local united chambers of commerce.

The Rolling Meadows Chamber of Commerce's policy committee has met recently with a number of area chamber representatives, including Arlington Heights, Elk Grove Village, Palatine, and Mount Prospect to discuss areas of mutual cooperation.

Meeting urged on sewer plan

A joint meeting of the Palatine Village Board and homeowners in the Spinnaker Cove and Virginia Lake subdivisions is being proposed by the Environmental Control Board to review engineering plans for a proposed storm sewer project.

Homeowners from the two subdivisions have expressed concern about the ecological ramifications of the proposed Saratoga relief storm sewer project. There is also concern the proposed storm sewer would increase flooding in the two subdivisions.

The proposed storm sewer would run south on Saratoga to Carpenter and south on Carpenter. It is designed to relieve flooding in sections of the Reseda and Virginia Lake subdivisions. Estimated cost of the project is $273,750.

The engineering cost estimates are being studied by the board's flood control committee.

Finance group to seek fund OK for special census

A special census may be made in Rolling Meadows next spring to update estimates of the city's population.

The city council finance, ordinance and judiciary committee last night agreed to present a resolution to the city council authorizing an expenditure of up to $10,000 for the census. The resolution may be presented to the council at its meeting tonight.

Local chambers of commerce may form group

A lobby to represent Northwest suburban business may be organizing in the form of local united chambers of commerce.

The Rolling Meadows Chamber of Commerce's policy committee has met recently with a number of area chamber representatives, including Arlington Heights, Elk Grove Village, Palatine, and Mount Prospect to discuss areas of mutual cooperation.

Rolling Meadows Chamber director Harry O'Brien predicted the group may expand soon to include 12 to 15 chambers which could eventually become a lobby for suburban business.

"Rolling Meadows has kind of volunteered to direct this," O'Brien said. He said the city chamber is keeping records of meeting dates and discussions for the group.

If organized formally, O'Brien said the group could become an effective lobby for business interests. The group could take stands on pending business-related legislation in the state General Assembly with the aim of benefiting local merchants and industry, O'Brien said.

He described the idea of the lobby as still in a very preliminary stage, but said the plan as well as other means of chamber cooperation will be discussed with a number of surrounding community chambers.

The census, which would be conducted under the guidance of the Federal Bureau of the Census, is being sought to document what city officials believe is a population increase of up to 3,400 in the city's 1970 population of 19,178.

The population increase would mean an increase in city revenues, since motor fuel taxes (MFT) and state income tax rebates are based in part on population.

Chuck Green, the city's administrative intern, presented figures to the committee last night showing a population increase since the 1970 census of 2,599 to 3,423 persons. Since the city receives about $15 per person in MFT and income tax rebates, the additional persons could mean about $38,938 to $51,345 in additional city revenue each year, Green said.

THE FIGURES are based on an estimate of three to four persons per apartment unit and four to five persons per single-family home. Green said the city's population may be about 23,000, based on new home and apartment construction in the city since 1970.

Committee chairman Ald. James Hudleston, 4th, said the population could be even higher than the 23,000 figure, because of construction not taken into account in the preliminary study.

Based on the estimated 23,000, the census bureau said the census would cost $8,535 to conduct, Green said.

The cost of the census could be refunded in the first year in which the city would receive the additional tax funds, Ald. Kenneth Retzke, 8th, said in support of the census. He said the $8,000 to $10,000 investment in the census could return some $40,000 per year in additional tax revenues.

If the census is conducted, the Federal Bureau of the Census must be notified 60 to 90 days before the census is performed, Green said. If the census is to be conducted in the spring, application should be sent to the federal bureau by early November.

City officials have discussed conducting a special census since 1970. At that time, city officials questioned the federal census, saying they felt the population was more than the 19,178 figure.

TEACHERS IN Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist. 15, who started the school year without a new salary schedule, marched on the district administration building last night "to support their negotiators."

according to John Sherman, head of the Classroom Teachers' Council which represents more than 90 per cent of the Dist. 15 teachers. Teacher and school board negotiators met last night for the sixth time since last May in an effort to agree on this year's salaries.

Teachers support negotiators in march

About 350 teachers marched to the Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist. 15 administration building during salary talks last night.

"We're just supporting our negotiating team," said one teacher. Some of the teachers carried signs with either the names of different schools or brief statements such as "Professional pay for professionals." Most were empty-handed.

The teachers, who started this school year without a new wage contract, marched from Pleasant Hill School, 434 W. Illinois, to the administration building, 505 S. Quentin, keeping to the side of the road to avoid traffic.

Once at the building, they lined up along the driveway leading from the back parking lot to the front door and clapped as their negotiators walked past them.

Members of the board negotiating team entered through a side door, avoiding the driveway. Board president Walt Sundling refused to comment on the demonstration, but board member Howard Meadows said "This does not mean anything to us. I have no reaction."

TEACHERS AND the school board have been negotiating 1973-74 salaries

since last May. Talks were temporarily suspended over the summer so teachers could study the financial situation of the district.

At the last negotiating session two weeks ago teachers were asking for a total increase of $336,790 over last year's salary package. No figures on how this amount would be distributed are available. The board's latest offer was about $152,000 under the teacher demand.

Until a negotiated settlement is reached, teachers will be receiving the same salaries they received last year. Sundling has said that any settlement would be retroactive to the beginning of the school year.

Teacher negotiators earlier this year refused a temporary 6 per cent pay raise, saying they preferred to settle salaries in one package, according to George Sherman head of the Classroom Teachers' Council, which represents more than 90 per cent of the teachers.

Slowly, the park district is gaining missile site land for public use acres held by the contesting parties in the struggle for control of the Arlington Heights Nike Base on Central Road. The park district hopes to shut out the Army in the future, but the fight is far from finished.

Last week the parks gained some hope in adding 52 acres to their total with the announcement by Rep. Philip M. Crane, R-12th, that the Defense Department no longer needs that parcel of land for Navy housing. The parks still must wait 30 to 90 days for the General Services Administration to poll other federal agencies to determine if any of them want the land.

The sides have been drawn up for use of the land. On one side is the Army maintaining the missile base is necessary to defend Chicago from an enemy attack. The Army also uses the site for National Guard maneuvers. The other side comprises the park district, area homeowners, a congressman and U.S. Senators.

THE ARMY FACILITY has had a checkered career. Should the parks eventually get the land, it will have served as a prison camp, an airfield, a trailer park, a missile base, an equipment depot for the Illinois National Guard and finally a golf course.

10 years, on efforts to acquire the land for a park.

"The first letter is dated Nov. 1, 1963, to U.S. Sen. Paul Douglas. We were asking about the site then. We had heard 100 acres of it was going to be declared surplus, so we included development of it in the 1964 referendum. Well, it wasn't surplus after all, so we had to change the referendum around," Thornton said of his first attempt to get part of the 137-acre site.

To Thornton, and park officials, the Nike base is an open plum in the midst of rapid urban and suburban sprawl. It is, according to him, one of the last big land parcels the district could acquire at a minimum of monetary outlay.

"Open land is needed in this growth area. We have about 350 acres of open land for 70,000 residents and the minimum ratio is 10 acres per 1,000 people. So you can see, we're in bad shape. Even with the entire base, we'd still be well below that standard," he said.

THE PARKS SCORED their first victory in improving the ratio in August when 13 acres of the base were deeded to the district. The land, across from Northwest Community Hospital, was outside the perimeter fence of the base.

Palatine Township Auditors unanimously agreed last night to use revenue sharing money to help fund the Countryside Center for the Handicapped, Headstart program for needy preschoolers, and the Crossroads Clinic for testing and detecting venereal disease in teenagers.

Township revenue funds promised to nine different agencies to date total $82,500. Revenue sharing is a federal program to distribute part of the U.S. government's income to state and local governments.

Countryside center will receive up to $4,500 to support rehabilitation workshops for an estimated eight handicapped adults from Palatine Township.

The township's largest allocation went to the Headstart program. Fifteen Palatine township children are already in the Schaumburg-based program. An additional 15 township preschoolers will be able to join the program with the township's $13,500 allocation.

"We could open a center in Palatine Township within 30 to 45 days," said Headstart spokesman Charles Joly.

THE HEADSTART program for Palatine Township preschoolers will be moved from Schaumburg to Palatine Township when the expanded program begins.

One of the township's most controversial requests, to fund the venereal disease detection clinic for teens, received approval for up to $5,000 on a one-time basis.

The Crossroads representatives met with no opposition when their request was approved last night. Statistics from the clinic in the past three months were detailed by clinic coordinator Barbara Michelin.

"We have seen 250 youths in the first five months. We've seen 411 youths in the last three months," Miss Michelin said.

THE PROGRAM began expanding in early January. According to Miss Michelin clinic doctors have seen 111 youths requesting venereal disease tests, 51 pregnancies, 34 post-abortion cases, 41 infections diagnosed as not venereal diseases.

A 112-unit condominium project between New and Old Wilke Roads near Algonquin Road in Arlington Heights has been started by Charles G. Matthies Inc. The 39-acre site will be built with four six-story buildings and 29 two-story buildings clustered around a central retention lake. All the condominium units will be two-bedroom models and are expected to be priced at about $40,000. The development site originally was owned by Miller Builders, developers of Surrey Ridge West subdivision. But it was sold when Miller divested itself of all its unbuilt Arlington Heights properties.

by AL MESSERSCHMIDT
State Rep. Eugene Schlickman will run again. Schlickman, R-Arlington Heights, announced yesterday he will seek a sixth term to "work for an open, truly representative house... to continue to speak out where others hesitate." The Arlington Heights attorney was optimistic in his fourth district candidacy announcement, despite personal setbacks in the spring General Assembly session. "I am proud of the battles I have fought and won, I am proud of the setbacks for they represent real challenges to the heavy handed, low dealing of a few who seem to think that advancing their own political ambitions comes before doing the job for which they were elected." Schlickman was unsuccessful last spring in an attempt to block the election of Rep. W. Robert Blair as House Speaker. Since then, the two have battled over legislation and political appointments. Blair recently dumped Schlickman as chairman of the legislative advisory commission to the Northeast Illinois Planning Commission. MAINE TOWNSHIP Committeeman Floyd Fulle, Wheeling Township Committeeman Richard Cowen and State Sen. John Nimrod supported his candidacy, Schlickman said. Nimrod and Arlington Heights Mayor Jack Walsh attended the press conference yesterday in Des Plaines. Schlickman, known for controversial support of parochialism, zoning reform and regional planning, said he will work to secure homeowner protection against shoddy home construction, for land-use planning, regional mass transit, elimination of sales tax on drugs and medicine, and legislative and election reform. "I will not accept contributions exceeding $100 from any source, no contributions from any corporation or special interest groups," he said. "All contributions must come from individuals." Schlickman said he will open his 1974 campaign records to the press. Schlickman said he plans to play a vital part in choosing a speaker for the House in the spring; "I can see myself going further than I did this time," he said.

Hoffman Estates OKs Westbury project

Over the strenuous objections of one trustee, the proposed development plan for Westbury was approved by the Hoffman Estates village board last night. Trustee Diane Jensen termed the plan for 4,472 residential units on 497 acres "terrible," and said the board was not voting on the plan but on who would pay the cost of multiple lawsuits focusing on it.

10-year fight to claim Nike lands for public

The site, along both sides of Palatine Road in Palatine Township, is to include 400 single-family homes; 4,000 apartments, townhouses and condominiums, and two commercial areas. The board voted only after an hour-long executive session in which last-minute negotiations were concluded. Although the village has been negotiating just slightly more than a year with Meridian Housing Corp., the planned developer, bargaining continued until 10:30 p.m. last night. The final points to be decided were parking and fence screening for the mid-rise apartment area. The village wanted 2 1/2 parking spaces per housing unit. Meridian had agreed to provide two. The final settlement provides 2 1/4.

HOFFMAN ESTATES agreed to grant unspecified variations to its fence ordinance provision for screening between commercial areas and apartment sections. Village Atty. Edward Hofert noted Meridian is providing more open space between the two types of development than the fence ordinance requires.

In opposing the Westbury project, Mrs. Jensen related the history of the property, formerly known as Howie-in-the-Hills, describing it as "riddled with hindsight, but not too much foresight." She noted there are arguments on both sides of the proposal, but pointed out her objections. The marshy land conditions will be expensive to correct, and "when it comes to money, developers don't like to spend it," she said. She noted the property covers only 75 acres more than Moon Lake Village subdivision, but will house residents equal in number to half the current population of Hoffman Estates.

planned for the site, but the district took the advice of David Gill, a golf course architect, and left the land in "passive use." The plans were scrapped in favor of waiting for the Navy land and eventually the Army acreage.

"Why a golf course? Well, it's the best possible use for the land. There is no need for more picnicking areas — it's not suitable for that anyway," Thornton said.

According to him, a golf course on the land represents the best use because: 1. Golf courses are good revenue-producers. 2. The land could be used for winter recreation. 3. Storm water basins could be incorporated into the course to alleviate flooding in the village.

"We have found golf courses to be very good revenue-producers. We checked all around the area, and we don't know of any that aren't a success," Thornton said.

THORNTON'S timetable calls for acquiring the Navy land from GSA around the first of the year, construction of a nine-hole course, followed by acquisition of the Army land and completion of a full 18-hole course with a clubhouse.

The first task is just about assured, according to persons close to land transfer. A spokesman for Rep. Crane said no other bids for the Navy land are foreseen.

The parks retained architect Gill at a cost of $5,000 to develop plans for the base. This was done to present the federal government with concrete proposals for the land; a necessary step in gaining "surplus" land.

There is another aspect the government wants to know about: what is the cost and how will it be financed?

"A very round, ballpark figure for the entire 18 holes and a clubhouse would be around $1 million," Thornton said. "We're still debating about the financing. We can have revenue or general obligation bonds. Revenue bonds would have to be paid off before money (from a golf facility) could go to other things. With G.O. bonds, the money can go around while they are being paid off. Our consultants with the National Golf Federation tell us G.O. bonds have a very good record of passing. Offhand, I can't think of any that haven't passed for a golf course." THE ARMY IS not likely to give up the Nike base without a struggle. It has been termed "vital to the air defense of the Chicago metropolitan area" by base commanders.

Questions are now being raised whether the base and armaments it commands would be effective in case of a missile attack. Its use as a National Guard depot is also coming under scrutiny from area legislators.

According to a Crane spokesman, the congressman has been making "inquiries" about the actual use of the base. He met this spring with homeowners near the base and said he "will go to bat" for a park on the site.

Sen. Adlai Stevenson III has also taken up the park district banner to acquire the land. He toured the base in May and met with residents and park officials prior to the government's decision to declare the first 13 acres surplus.

A spokesman for the senator said, "We are looking into the matter to see if the Army's claims of necessity are justified."

AMONG THE questions to be answered are whether the facility with its National Guard component could be moved to Ft. Sheridan and whether the base provides adequate protection in case of an enemy attack.

Mid-rise structures will be about 500 feet from the Winston Knolls single-family home subdivision, she said. Arguments that the "buyer should beware," either in the project or near it, are "nothing but a copout," she concluded.

Trustee Melvin Timmons, who lives in Winston Knolls, said he shares some of Mrs. Jensen's feelings, but would accept committee recommendations. Only Mrs. Jensen voted against the plan.

Hofert is to report agreement to the plan by the village before Chief U.S. District Court Judge Edwin Robson at 2 p.m. today. The settlement will not be final until Meridian deposits the $5.6 million purchase price for the property and sufficient funds to finance other provisions of the settlement. Preparation of legal documents may take 30 days, Hofert has said.

Settlement of the zoning in Meridian's plan brings to an end lawsuits totaling roughly $1.5 million against the village over its involvement in obtaining special assessments to finance public improvements on the property.

3rd swimming pool needed, says park director Derda

(Editor's Note: Need and plans for a third swimming pool in Schaumburg Park District are examined in the second part of a series on a $2.5 million bond referendum the district will hold Saturday. If approved, the referendum will also provide a maintenance building, discussed in a separate story today. Future articles will explain proposals to acquire land for a nature center and to install an enclosure for year round swimming pool use.)

by STIRLING MORITA
Northbrook has cycling and ice skating. Schaumburg has aquatics.
That's what Paul Derda, director of the Schaumburg Park District, said when referring to the need for a third swimming pool in the district.
The proposed facility would cost about $600,000 to construct. The Olympic-sized pool is included in the park improvements section of the $2.5 million park district referendum to be conducted Saturday.

(See related story on page 5)
Referendum costs to the average taxpayer are estimated to average $13 a year for the first five years. After that, payments will drop. Park officials have said they expect bonds will be retired in 15 years.
The swimming pool, with its competition diving area, fountain and roof sundeck, would be in Melneke Park just behind the Melneke Community Center at 220 E. Weathersfield Way.
DERDA SAID a swimming pool was one of the top priorities indicated in a recent attitude and interest survey conducted in the district.
The site east of Roselle Road was chosen because there are pools in western (Atcher) and central (Clivic) Schaumburg and because the growth pattern of Schaumburg is toward the east, Derda said.

"We just have a strong aquatics program, one we've been able to develop," Derda added.
Bill Mercel of Kessler, Mercel and Lochner Inc., an architectural firm handling plans for the park improvements project, said the pool would be 50 meters long and about 20 meters (60-feet) wide and hold 320,000 gallons of water.
The pool would be 4 1/2 feet deep in the center and 3 1/4 feet deep near the edges. The shallow area would be ideal for swimming lessons because of little danger of new swimmers floundering in deep water, Derda said.
THE COMPETITION diving area would hold about 380,000 gallons of water, sloping from 15 feet in the center to six feet along the sides. Mercel said there may be plans for a 10-meter diving platform. The area will have one and three meter springboards.

A small wading area for youngsters would be at the southeast part of the complex. A sun deck over the bathhouse would allow privacy for adults wishing to get away from the children along the pool deck.
A fountain would be a cultural addition to the park and provide a scenic barrier for the pool, Derda said.
Parking spaces would be added to the present facilities for the community center.
Merce said the pool would feature a filtration system that allows freshly filtered water to flow to the surface from the bottom of the pool.
Derda said the separate living area could provide a place for swim lessons while the larger pool is open to the public.

"This is a young community with lots of children," he said. "We're going to get maximum use of our facilities."
The director said growing numbers of persons enroll in swim lessons and near-capacity crowds during regular hours at the other two facilities necessitate another pool. He added great growth is projected for Schaumburg, and the pool would help accommodate part of the growth.
"BOTH OUR POOLS are reaching capacity proportions already," Derda said. "There's no question of need now."
He said there has been a large increase in the numbers of persons using the pool facilities over the years.
According to park district statistics, in 1971 when Atcher Pool opened halfway through the swim season, 47,000 persons used the district's facilities. In 1972, the number was 57,000, and in 1973 about 65,000.

"We're going to have enough people to fill the pools. It's not cornfields anymore," Derda said.

Diane Jensen dissents

Hoffman finally approves Westbury project plans

Over the strenuous objections of one trustee, the proposed development plan for Westbury was approved by the Hoffman Estates village board last night.
Trustee Diane Jensen termed the plan for 4,472 residential units on 497 acres "terrible," and said the board was not voting on the plan but on who would pay the cost of multiple lawsuits focusing on it.
The site, along both sides of Palatine Road in Palatine Township, is to include 400 single-family homes; 4,000 apartments, townhouses and condominiums, and two commercial areas.

The board voted only after an hour-long executive session in which last-minute negotiations were concluded. Although the village has been negotiating just slightly more than a year with Meridian Housing Corp., the planned developer, bargaining continued until 10:30 p.m. last night.
The final points to be decided were parking and fence screening for the mid-rise apartment area. The village wanted 2 1/2 parking spaces per housing unit. Meridian had agreed to provide two. The final settlement provides 2 1/4.

HOFFMAN ESTATES agreed to grant unspecified variations to its fence ordinance provision for screening between commercial areas and apartment sections. Village Atty. Edward Hofert noted Meridian is providing more open space between the two types of development than the fence ordinance requires.
In opposing the Westbury project, Mrs. Jensen related the history of the property, formerly known as Howie-in-the-Hills, describing it as "riddled with hindsight, but not too much foresight." She noted there are arguments on both sides of the proposal, but pointed out her objections. The marshy land conditions will be expensive to correct, and "when it comes to money, developers don't like to spend it," she said. She noted the property covers only 73 acres more than Moon Lake Village subdivision, but will house residents equal in number to half the current population of Hoffman Estates.
Mid-rise structures will be about 500 feet from the Winston Knolls single-family home subdivision, she said. Arguments that the "buyer should beware," either in the project or near it, are "nothing but a copout," she concluded.
Trustee Melvin Timmons, who lives in Winston Knolls, said he shares some of Mrs. Jensen's feelings, but would accept committee recommendations. Only Mrs. Jensen voted against the plan.
Hofert is to report agreement to the plan by the village before Chief U.S. District Court Judge Edwin Robson at 2 p.m. today. The settlement will not be final until Meridian deposits the $5.6 million purchase price for the property and sufficient funds to finance other provisions of the settlement. Preparation of legal documents may take 30 days, Hofert has said.
Settlement of the zoning in Meridian's plan brings to an end lawsuits totaling roughly $1.5 million against the village over its involvement in obtaining special assessments to finance public improvements on the property.

Local chambers may form group

A lobby to represent Northwest suburban business may be organizing in the form of local united chambers of commerce.
The Rolling Meadows Chamber of Commerce's policy committee has met recently with a number of area chamber representatives, including Arlington Heights, Elk Grove Village, Palatine, and Mount Prospect to discuss areas of mutual cooperation.
Rolling Meadows Chamber director Harry O'Brien predicted the group may expand soon to include 12 to 15 chambers which could eventually become a lobby for suburban business.
"Rolling Meadows has kind of volunteered to direct this," O'Brien said. He said the city chamber is keeping records of meeting dates and discussions for the group.

If organized formally, O'Brien said the group could become an effective lobby for business interests. The group could take stands on pending business-related legislation in the state General Assembly with the aim of benefiting local merchants and industry, O'Brien said.
He described the idea of the lobby as still in a very preliminary stage, but said the plan as well as other means of chamber cooperation will be discussed with a number of surrounding community chambers.

State Rep. Schlickman tells plans to seek sixth term

by AL MESSENSCHMIDT
State Rep. Eugene Schlickman will run again.
Schlickman, R-Arlington Heights, announced yesterday he will seek a sixth term to "work for an open, truly representative house . . . to continue to speak out where others hesitate."

Eugene Schlickman

chairman of the legislative advisory commission to the Northeast Illinois Planning Commission.
MAINE TOWNSHIP Committeeman Floyd Fuller, Wheeling Township Committeeman Richard Cowen and State Sen. John Nimrod supported his candidacy, Schlickman said.
Nimrod and Arlington Heights Mayor Jack Walsh attended the press conference yesterday in Des Plaines.
Schlickman, known for controversial support of parochial, zoning reform and regional planning, said he will work to secure homeowner protection against shoddy home construction, for land-use planning, regional mass transit, elimination of sales tax on drugs and medicine, and legislative and election reform.
"I will not accept contributions exceeding $100 from any source, no contributions from any corporation or special interest groups," he said. "All contributions must come from individuals."
Schlickman said he will open his 1974 campaign records to the press.
Schlickman said he plans to play a vital part in choosing a speaker for the House in the spring: "I can see myself going further than I did this time," he said.

Girl found in ditch; probe on

Schaumburg police are investigating circumstances surrounding the discovery early yesterday of an unconscious teenager in a ditch in unincorporated Cook County southeast of village limit.
Positive identification of the 14-year-old girl was made by her mother later yesterday at Alexian Brothers Medical Center, Elk Grove Village, where she had been taken for treatment by Schaumburg Fire Department ambulance.
She had been missing from home since approximately 8 p.m. Sunday.

The girl was discovered several blocks from her home after a neighbor called police about 8 a.m. to report seeing a body lying in a ditch behind his property.
Police who arrived on the scene were unable to detect a pulse though a fireman later detected signs of life.
Hospital officials described the girl in fair condition yesterday and said she is being treated for acute psychotic reaction with secondary anxiety depression.

Free ambulance service reason for tax hike vote

by STIRLING MORITA
The Hoffman Estates Fire Protection District needs funds to offset financial burden caused by free ambulance service, according to a study of the district prepared by a private firm.
An ambulance tax referendum to be held Saturday is planned to raise those funds.
A user's fee was recommended in the study prepared under contract with the village by National Loss Control Service Corp., Long Grove. However, district officials have avoided the mandatory fee and about two months ago suggested users make ambulance donations instead.
The district so far has not received funds from donations. The referendum will determine if the fire district will be allowed to levy an ambulance tax. The maximum rate permitted by law is 25 cents per $100 of assessed valuation. District officials have estimated the district will need a rate between 10 and 15 cents per $100 assessed valuation.

THE ESTIMATED rates would generate between $75,000 and $105,000. An owner of a home assessed at $10,000 would pay between $10 and $15 in additional taxes the first year.
The report estimated the district would pay about $140,000 a year solely to maintain ambulance service — including manpower and all equipment. Presently, these costs are charged to the district's general operating fund.
District trustees estimate it will cost more than $20,000 a year to maintain two ambulances. The extra funds, if approved, would possibly pay a share of paramedics' salaries, thus freeing some money to pay off a $32,000 debt expected at the end of this fiscal year.

The extra money could also cover any anticipated increase in the number of ambulance calls. In 1972, there were 674 ambulance calls. District officials have estimated that each call costs about $20.
"The ambulance service as presently provided by the HEFPD is of a high standard," the report said. "With the rising cost of providing all services, it boils down to the simple fact that some form of assistance must be provided or the service will need to be cut back in the same manner that is occurring in so many other services."

WILLIAM BRILLIANT, president of the HEFPD board of trustees, has vowed to keep the ambulance service at its high standard as long as possible, even if the referendum does not pass.
The report added the department should continue to increase the number of firemen certified as paramedics. Seven firemen have qualified as paramedics and eight as emergency medical technicians (EMT). It is anticipated the district will need 12 paramedics and 12 EMTs by 1975.
Brilliant has cited the high cost of medical training as one of the financial burdens on the district. Other anticipated burdens are the increase in ambulance calls and a state law calling for updating of ambulance equipment.

Pat Gerlach

Hep. Don Totten may have to consider buying a gross of track shoes to keep up with Schaumburg's Vince Carsello, his more-than-probable opponent in the spring GOP committeeman race.

Vince, a veteran of nearly a dozen years of managing village election campaigns, has never lost a candidate. Furthermore, he has no intention of losing his own first bid for political office, even though through the years he has vowed he would never be a candidate for anything.

A recent physical fitness program may have convinced him otherwise, it seems. "Don had better get himself in good physical condition because I intend to outrun him in the township," Vince remarked the other day.

But when it comes to Don's role as state representative, he wouldn't find any stronger supporter than Vince, who thinks Totten is tops in Springfield. In fact, if he were not considering the committeeman spot, Vince might offer to manage Don's campaign for a second term in the capitol. Bear in mind — he has never lost a candidate and Don may need that kind of help when an opponent, perhaps almost ready to surface, speaks about his intentions in the Third District state race.

INCIDENTALLY, Mayor Bob Atcher shares Vince's opinion of Don's performance in the legislature. "I feel he is turning into an extremely fine legislator," the mayor commented Sunday.

Atcher's remarks came during the Irish-Presbyterian St. Luke's Hospital service league champagne cocktail party at the Schaumburg Road hospital site. In fact, the two were observed in a long tele-a-tele that afternoon.

The party was a celebration for service leaguers who have spent long hours working for a local hospital. It was held in a tent at the site in order to better identify the location and hopefully increase membership in the league.

Representatives of the downtown hospital say they anticipate a January or February groundbreaking in Schaumburg.

THE CITY OF CHICAGO has been talking airport-in-the-lake for years, but Schaumburg is now the scene of a lake in the airport.

Construction of a nearly $600,000 drainage system is now in progress in Centex-Schaumburg Industrial Park. A retention basin under construction on the south side of Irving Park Road is just east of Schaumburg Airport. It is on land that may be acquired by the airport if expansion is recommended by a professional engineering study.

CONGRATULATIONS are in order for Craig Jay Pirach of Winston Knolls on his Bar Mitzvah to be held Saturday at Beth Tikvah Congregation.

LIBRA BIRTHDAYS were recently celebrated by Marylu Boshka, David Bond and Ken and Ursula Orzolek, of Hoffman Estates.

OLD AGE IS THE time of life when you know all the answers and nobody asks you the questions, observes Sheila Nobetter.

School board wrapup

Refusal to pay fees —no report card?

John Emma told the Schaumburg Township Dist. 54 School Board that they were creating a psychological problem for his children and punishing him by withholding report cards for objecting to pay a book fee.

"Who are you disciplining? Me or my child?" the Schaumburg man asked at last Thursday's meeting.

"This is a harmful action and could damage" his children's personalities, Emma maintains. "I object to paying a book fee. I haven't paid for five years and don't plan on starting now."

Emma said the district can't prove to him that each penny paid in book fees is used directly to purchase or mend books. "If they could, I'd pay the money," he added.

HE SAYS board members and administrators told him all funds are pooled together to pay for everything.

"Why I could be paying for salaries or something," he said. Supt. Wayne Schable said the district does collect a book fee to defray expenses and will continue to do so. He told Emma that in hardship cases the fee is waived.

Emma said he plans to sue the district if his children do not receive a report card to take home at the next marking period.

"They are making my kid different and I don't think it's fair," he complained.

Students study the heart

Sixth-graders in 14 Schaumburg Township Dist. 54 schools will take part in an in-depth study of the heart and circulatory system.

The program is based on a curriculum provided by the Heart Association of North Cook County. It was developed and expanded by Hannah Wilson, Dist. 54 director of health services, and teachers who taught the program at Dirksen and Collins schools last year.

PARTICIPATING schools this year include Dirksen, Collins, Hale, Blackhawk, Dooley, Schaumburg, Fox, Eisenhower, Hillcrest, Fairview, Churchill, Lakeview, Hanover and McArthur.

Carl Seltzer, curriculum director said teachers, students and parents expressed a keen interest in the program last year.

Students learned to use a stethoscope and sphygmometer to test their own blood pressure. They also did their own blood typing and conducted individual projects on prevention of heart disease.

Family involvement was overwhelming, said Seltzer who recommended the proposal adapted by the board.

In the program models of the heart are used together with blood testing kits and typing kits. Films and lectures by a cardiologist, nurse and a member of the Red Cross are part of the course.

It will cost $4,649 to purchase materials and pay costs of the program. The Heart Association will give the district $615 worth of materials and train teachers.

Attitude survey is set

A community attitude survey will be taken in Schaumburg Township School Dist. 54 within the next few months.

The survey, to be conducted by Dr. Harold Collins of Northern Illinois University, is to determine the attitudes of residents on such things as educational programs, facilities, lunch programs, teaching staff and transportation. Up to $7,500 has been allocated to cover its cost.

Board member Gordon Thoren, chairman of the community relations committee, recommended the survey. He said it will be used along with other sources to help plot the future operation of the district.

Knightsbridge seeks building permits

Representatives of Knightsbridge Corp. will ask Schaumburg's village board tonight to release additional building permits for units three and four of their subdivision west of Jones Road.

In March the village board refused to issue additional permits for the subdivision because of builder Nick Herman's failure to install public improvements and satisfy homeowners' complaints.

Last month, William Bibo, former president of Knightsbridge Homeowners Association, invested in the corporation, becoming Herman's partner. He pledged he would assume responsibility for the subdivision along with the builder.

In the meantime citations have been issued to Knightsbridge Corp. principals for moving two families into homes without occupancy permits. A hearing will be held Nov. 7 in Schaumburg branch of Cook County Circuit Court.

Clerk-typist, crossing guard positions open

Schaumburg police need personnel to fill two part-time positions.

There is an opening for a part-time clerk-typist. The work week would be 20 hours.

A crossing guard is needed for Jane Addams Jr. High School, 700 S. Spring-lough Rd. The guard would work about three hours a day at various times.

For further information, call Lt. Robert Hammond at 894-3149.

Conant boosters club meeting Tuesday

The Conant High School boosters club will meet today at 8 p.m. in the school cafeteria.

Faculty sponsors of the drama, band, girls athletics and other all-school clubs and activities will be present to answer questions from parents.

The meeting will be conducted by Edward Olanice, president. Membership in the boosters club is open to all residents of the high school district and anyone interested in joining is encouraged to attend the meeting.

Twinbrook to offer school year swimming

An instructional swim program for first through sixth graders will be offered by Twinbrook YMCA this fall.

Sessions, to be held at Elgin YMCA pool, will consist of eight weeks each and will run throughout the school year, said Richard Barnett, YMCA program director.

Transportation will be provided by the YMCA.

"The program is designed to teach the boys and girls swimming and water safety skills from the beginning to the advanced level," Barnett explained.

Registration for the program is now being taken at the YMCA office at Schaumburg Township Public Library, 32 W. Library Ln.

THE CIRCUS CLOWN has always been the idol of children everywhere. Saturday, several youngsters from the Northwest suburbs got the chance to play clown courtesy of

PTA notes

The first of four general PTA meetings for the current academic year at Hoffman School will be the annual open house, with introduction of teachers and displays of student work in each classroom.

A short business meeting will begin at 7:30 p.m. today in the school at 101 Grand Canyon Parkway, Hoffman Estates. Members of a nominating committee to slate officers for the 1974-75 school year will be selected.

Persons who have not yet renewed PTA memberships can do so at the meeting. Refreshments will be served.

Dr. Thomas Dooley PTA will hold open house for parents of children in grades four through six starting at 7:45 p.m. today in the multi-purpose room of the school, 622 Norwood Ln. Principal William Shatkus will give a brief talk and introduce teachers. Nina Jones, PTA president, will present each teacher with a "welcome back to school" gift.

The PTA of Fairview School, 146 Arizona Blvd., Hoffman Estates, will meet at 8 p.m. today in the school gymnasium. The meeting will adjourn for an open house, in which visitors can meet their children's teachers and visit classrooms. Refreshments will be served.

The first general meeting of Edwin Aldrin PTA will be at 7:30 p.m. today in the multi-purpose room of the school at 617 Boxwood Dr., Schaumburg. Colors will be presented by school patrol children. The language arts program will be explained by Mrs. Jo Telford of Dist. 54. An open house for parents of children in grades three through five will be held after the business meeting.

Police arrest three for paint-sniffing

Two Schaumburg men and a 16-year-old Schaumburg girl were arrested yesterday afternoon by village police for allegedly sniffing spray paint in a cornfield.

Charged with inhaling an intoxicating substance were Vito Badalamenti, 20, of 504 Brockton Ln.; Michael Cohen, 19, of 825 Gregory Ln., and the girl. The two men were also charged with contributing to the delinquency of a minor.

OFFICER ROBERT Stecht arrested the three in a field in the 800 block of Cedarcrest Drive about 3:30 p.m. after a citizen's call reporting suspicious activity, police said.

They are to appear Nov. 14 in Schaumburg branch of Cook County Circuit Court.

Jewels, appliances taken from home

Schaumburg police are investigating a burglary Sunday in which about $2,300 worth of jewelry and appliances were taken from the Mervin Taradash home, 816 Mansfield Ct.

The Taradash family, returning from a visit with relatives about 5 p.m., discovered the burglary. Taken were two watches, several rings, a color television set and stereo equipment.

Police said no sign of forced entry was found.

Maintenance unit also will benefit

Future development of the Schaumburg Park District maintenance department will be decided by local voters in a $2.5 million referendum Saturday.

Included in the $1.6 million parks improvements section of the referendum is a maintenance garage and equipment to cost about $250,000.

Residents will vote on the park improvements and $700,000 land acquisition sections separately.

The maintenance crew does not have a facility in which to work during the winter months. Other established park districts do have such facilities for their crews.

The facility has been tabbed by Paul Derda, park district director, as a top priority item. A site has not been selected yet.

Zoning chairman asks disclosure in all requests

The chairman of the Mount Prospect Zoning Board of Appeals is taking steps to require disclosure of all owners of property involved in zoning cases.

Carolyn H. Krause said yesterday she plans to work with village building and zoning director Buell B. Dutton to force holders of secret land trusts to reveal their identities.

Mrs. Krause said she is not prompted by any instances of fraud, but simply believes identification of all property owners seeking rezoning would be a good policy to follow.

"There is a need because of public interest to have these owners revealed," she said. "It's not only that there might be someone with a conflict of interest;

it's just that we should know who owns the property."

Until recently, Illinois permitted beneficiaries of land trusts to remain secret, but a law that went into effect Oct. 1 outlaws secrecy in land trusts involved in any zoning procedure.

Mrs. Krause said about one-quarter of the cases that come before the local zoning board involve unidentified owners. Virtually all of these instances are applications for planned unit developments.

Mrs. Krause said she did not believe that forcing holders of secret land trusts will discourage developers from building in Mount Prospect.

She also indicated she felt the new policy could be instituted administratively, rather than going through the village board.

State Rep. Schlickman plans to seek 6th term

by AL MESSELSCHMIDT

State Rep. Eugene Schlickman will run again.

Schlickman, R-Arlington Heights, announced yesterday he will seek a sixth term to "work for an open, truly representative house . . . to continue to speak out where others hesitate."

The Arlington Heights attorney was optimistic in his fourth district candidacy announcement, despite personal setbacks in the spring General Assembly session.

"I am proud of the battles I have fought and won, I am proud of the setbacks for they represent real challenges to the heavy handed, low dealing of a few who seem to think that advancing their own political ambitions comes before doing the job for which they were elected."

Schlickman was unsuccessful last spring in an attempt to block the election of Rep. W. Robert Blair as House Speaker. Since then, the two have battled over legislation and political appointments. Blair recently dumped Schlickman as chairman of the legislative advisory commission to the Northeast Illinois Planning Commission.

MAINE TOWNSHIP Committeeman Floyd Fulle, Wheeling Township Committeeman Richard Cowen and State Sen. John Nimrod supported his candidacy, Schlickman said.

Nimrod and Arlington Heights Mayor Jack Walsh attended the press conference yesterday in Des Plaines.

Schlickman, known for controversial support of parochialism, zoning reform and regional planning, said he will work to secure homeowner protection against shoddy home construction, for land-use planning, regional mass transit, elimination of sales tax on drugs and medicine, and legislative and election reform.

"I will not accept contributions exceeding $100 from any source, no contributions from any corporation or special interest groups," he said. "All contributions must come from individuals."

Schlickman said he will open his 1974 campaign records to the press.

Schlickman said he plans to play a vital part in choosing a speaker for the House in the spring; "I can see myself going further than I did this time," he said.

Lions candy day slated Friday

The traditional candy day to raise money for the blind will be sponsored Friday in Mount Prospect by the local Lions Club.

Lions Club volunteers will be at the Chicago and North Western Ry. station and at main street corners during the day, offering candy rolls for contributions.

The local goal is $2,000 toward the state goal of $1 million.

Candy day helps support the Hadley School for the Blind in Winnetka; Leader Dogs for the Blind, Rochester, Mich.; Illinois Camp Lions for Visually Handicapped Children; Dialogue, a recorded service for the blind; and Illinois Society for the Prevention of Blindness.

On a local level, proceeds help the Mount Prospect Lions to set up glaucoma clinics, and to buy braille writers, typewriters, tape recorders and canes.

Local chambers of commerce may form group

A lobby to represent Northwest suburban business may be organizing in the form of local united chambers of commerce.

The Rolling Meadows Chamber of Commerce's policy committee has met recently with a number of area chamber representatives, including Arlington Heights, Elk Grove Village, Palatine, and Mount Prospect to discuss areas of mutual cooperation.

Rolling Meadows Chamber director Harry O'Brien predicted the group may expand soon to include 12 to 15 chambers which could eventually become a lobby for suburban business.

"Rolling Meadows has kind of volunteered to direct this," O'Brien said. He said the city chamber is keeping records of meeting dates and discussions for the group.

If organized formally, O'Brien said the group could become an effective lobby for business interests. The group could take stands on pending business-related legislation in the state General Assembly with the aim of benefiting local merchants and industry, O'Brien said.

He described the idea of the lobby as still in a very preliminary stage, but said the plan as well as other means of chamber cooperation will be discussed with a number of surrounding community chambers.

Teichert, PHIA to huddle tonight

Mount Prospect Mayor Robert D. Teichert will discuss mutual concerns tonight with the Prospect Heights Improvement Association.

The future of the Rob Roy Golf Course and Prospect Heights' plans for incorporation are expected to be among the topics discussed at the regular monthly meeting, scheduled to begin at 8 p.m. in St. Aphonsus Catholic Church, 411 N. Wheeling Rd., Prospect Heights.

Garbagemen vote next week on new 1-year contract

Garbagemen from Browning-Ferris Industries of Illinois Inc. will vote next week on a tentative one-year contract with the Barrington scavenger service.

Representatives of the Chicago and Suburban Refuse Disposal Association, the bargaining agent for the firm, and Local 705 of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, which represents the workers, agreed upon the tentative contract during negotiations Friday night.

Frank Grady, a union official, confirmed yesterday that the 75 garbagemen will vote on whether to accept the contract next Monday night, but refused to discuss the details of the contract.

The extent of raises and benefits will determine whether residents of the six Northwest suburbs served by Browning-Ferris can expect an increase in their scavenger rates.

The garbagemen had opened negotiations two months ago seeking a $1 an hour raise over their present wages of $5.05 an hour.

Other contract issues include benefits and working conditions.

The garbagemen had gone out on a wildcat strike last Monday, when the previous contract expired, but returned to work on Tuesday. The new contract will be retroactive to Oct. 1.

Communities served by Browning-Ferris are Hoffman Estates, Inverness, Mount Prospect, Palatine and parts of Prospect Heights and Schaumburg.

Zoners OK shop center at Briarwood

A proposed neighborhood shopping center near the Lake Briarwood subdivision has been endorsed by the Mount Prospect Zoning Board of Appeals.

The zoning board has voted 4-1 to recommend that the village board allow construction of the small shopping center on a two-acre site at Algonquin Road and Briarwood Drive in southwestern Mount Prospect.

The shopping center, as outlined by developers Donald and Julian Geller of Chicago, would contain 12 stores, including a Pizza Hut restaurant, a frozen meat shop, coin-operated laundry, television sales shop, retail shoe store, dry cleaners and restaurant.

The stores would mainly serve the Lake Briarwood area, which lies just outside the village boundaries and the Crystal Towers apartment complex under development in Mount Prospect.

The Geller firm has developed other small shopping centers in the Northwest suburbs, including Leong's Restaurant in Schaumburg and the Convenient Food Store complex at Central and Busse roads in Arlington Heights, near Mount Prospect.

No objectors to the shopping center were present at the public hearing Thursday night.

Voting for the development were zoning board chairman Carolyn Krause and board members Gilbert Basnick, Roger P. Anderson and Ken P. Kazmar. Voting against it was John Martino.

In other action, the zoning board gave routine approval to several pre-annexation agreements.

It's homecoming week at Hersey, Forest View

Activities for students, teachers and alumni are planned this week as part of homecoming festivities at two local high schools.

The coronation of a king and queen will climax homecoming festivities at John Hersey High School in Arlington Heights.

The king and queen candidates will be presented to the student body Thursday morning in an assembly. School clubs and organizations have nominated five candidates for each position.

The homecoming royalty will be crowned at a ceremony at 7:30 p.m. Thursday at the school. A pep rally is set for Friday along with a car rally prior to the homecoming football game with Fremd High School.

The homecoming dance will be from 8 to 11 p.m. Saturday in the gym. The dance will be sponsored by the Varsity Club.

HOMECOMING activities at Forest View High School will include a film festival, powder puff football game and dance exhibition. The festivities will get under way today with the film festival in the cafeteria during lunch hours. All films are student productions.

Wednesday, the school's "Town Criers" singing group will perform and there will be a tea for faculty members, foreign exchange students and new students at 3:40 p.m.

The English Department will sponsor a readers' theatre Thursday afternoon. That night, junior and senior girls will clash at 6 p.m. in a powder puff football game to be followed at 7 p.m. by a pep rally.

Friday, "Ground Grenadier" burgers will be on the lunch menu, made from the remains of the Elk Grove football team. Forest View will meet Elk Grove Saturday in the annual homecoming game. The Orchestras Dance Club will present an exhibition Friday afternoon.

The 1973 homecoming queen will be crowned in a student assembly scheduled for 3 p.m. Friday in the boys' gym.

The big game will start at 8 p.m. at the Forest View field. The queen will be presented to the crowd at halftime.

Lil Floros

WELCOME TO the Rev. Eldon Vern Toll, the new pastor at Northwest Covenant Church. He comes from Salina, Kansas with his wife, Jerline, and children Marvin, Carolyn and Yvonne.

DOROTHY AND Dick Barrett hosted a party to mark her parents' 50th wedding anniversary Sunday afternoon at their home at 114 S. Wa. Pella. Dorothy and her brother, Bill Shelander, invited about 60 friends and relatives to celebrate the golden anniversary of their parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Shelander, of Chicago. The Barrett daughters came home from college for the occasion — Jenn from Western Illinois University and Mary Lou from Valparaiso University.

IN CASE YOU'VE wondered, the PTA money-making Bingo evening at Westbrook School was not exactly a super success.

"It was disappointing," said Ellen Wehler, chairman of the PTA Ways and Means committee. "We took in $344 on the bingo games, but we had to pay out $100 on a license, cards, splinter and the 10 per cent state take. So, we actually made only about $250 on the bingo. However, we also sold refreshments and between the two we cleared about $300 for the evening."

They may try again in March, since their bingo license is still good then. They may try then to hold it on a week night preceding Institute day (when the youngsters can sleep in) and provide a movie at the same time for the kiddies.

TIMES CHANGE. It used to be that Toastmasters were men and Toastmistresses were women. Now, it's up to the individual club as to whether they want to open membership to women, reports Art Wiebe of the Elmhurst Toastmasters Club.

"A year ago," Art reports, "a lady joined our Toastmasters group. She came for three weeks and then had a job transfer and is not in the area any more."

If you're interested, ladies, give it a go!

THE PROSPECT HEIGHTS Lions Club conducted a glaucoma screening a week ago and tested 170 people. Results show that two of those tested were "suspect" of having the disease. Eleven others were found to have eye deficiencies and were urged to have them checked.

The Lions Club is to be praised for its work along this line. The Illinois Society for the Prevention of Blindness actually conducts the exam, but the Lions Club sets up the program, staffs it and then makes a generous contribution to the ISPB.

Dick Hansen, chairman of the Lions Club committee that ran the tests, commented, "We are pleased that we are able to provide this service and encourage people to take advantage of the screening when the testing unit returns next year. We would have been able to handle more than twice the number that were tested."

CHALK UP MORE credits to the Hershey High School marching band! Last week, at a Chicagoland Marching Band Festival at Wheeling, the band received the "outstanding band of the day" trophy, a first place award and a "superior" rating. Much credit should go to Donald Caneva, director of the band.

TICKETS ARE NOW available for the Sports Banquet featuring Ron Santo, Chicago Cubs star third baseman, to be held Nov. 9 at St. Mark Center. Tickets, including a hot dog dinner, are $2 and are available by calling 255-2335.

The Sports Night Banquets are an annual event at the Center. Other sports heroes who have appeared are Don Kessinger, Randy Hundley, Gale Sayers. It's always a sellout.

$9 million Holy Family project starts

Ground will be broken today at 2 p.m. for a $9 million construction and modernization project at Holy Family Hospital in Des Plaines.

The projects are designed to expand and improve patient care service, according to Sister M. Amata, executive vice president.

Enlarged and remodeled facilities will expand intensive and coronary care services, emergency room, pathology, radiology, nuclear medicine and administrative facilities. The addition of 10 coronary care beds and eight intensive care beds will increase bed capacity from 235 to 253.

"WITH THESE NEW and remodeled facilities, Holy Family can meet the anticipated growth and changes in our hospital's role in the community," Sister Amata said.

The project has been approved by the Hospital Planning Council of Metropolitan Chicago, the Northeastern Illinois Planning Commission, Comprehensive Health Planning, Inc. and the North Suburban Association for Health Resources.

A notice of capital expenditure has been filed with the Comprehensive State Health Planning Agency and Catholic Church authorities have granted permission for the hospital to negotiate a loan.

Administrative offices and electrical and mechanical services will also be expanded and upgraded.

ONE OF THE major portions of the project will be housed in new construction on the south end of the hospital, near the emergency area. A tower design will house the intensive care and coronary care units, designed to provide complete privacy for each patient and constant visual supervision from the nurses' station. Each bed will have a complete monitoring system for vital functions.

The emergency room will be enlarged to a trauma unit with 11 treatment spaces. It will include a separate room equipped for caring for patients with serious heart and breathing problems.

Special monitoring of patients can take place in the emergency room by telemetry.

Five of the emergency spaces can also serve as holding or observation beds where patients may stay on a non-admitted basis following an injury. The department will provide more waiting room, on call physician's room and a police room for officers accompanying emergency patients.

The emergency area also will include five examining rooms where private physicians may examine and treat outpatients. Ambulances will drive up to an enlarged, covered area where four ambulances can be unloaded simultaneously. An infra-red solar heating device will be triggered with arrival of an ambulance so patients are not subjected to extreme variations in temperature.

SPACE FOR enlarging radiology, pathology and administrative facilities will be provided in the first floor wing across the front of the hospital facing River Road and along the north side.

Radiology will be enlarged 50 per cent. The new pathology department, twice the present size, will be in the front of the hospital.

The new administrative center will contain about 50,000 square feet of space for offices, meeting rooms, visitors lounge and gift shop.

IS HE OK? Pupils at Mount Prospect's Lions Park School will have a good opportunity to find out. William J. Nelson is their new principal, replacing Janice Rodriguez, who left for Naperville. A graduate of Indiana, Northern Illinois and Michigan State universities, Nelson has taught in Lake Zurich and acted as a workshop consultant in Michigan public schools.

Mystery still shrouds man's death in Chile

by STEVE BROWN

Why? That simple question has begun to resound since the death of a Des Plaines man in Santiago, Chile.

A puzzled group of friends and relatives have wondered aloud why Frank Teruggi Jr., 23, of 731 S. Third Ave., Des Plaines, was killed there. The circumstances surrounding his death still remain clouded.

All that is known is that Teruggi was last seen by his roommate, David Hathaway of Seattle, Wash., on Sept. 21. His body was identified in a Santiago morgue last week. What might have transpired between the time he was taken away from his cell in the soccer stadium and shot still remains unknown.

Chilean government officials contend that Teruggi was not executed by the government, but had been released from custody.

THEY INSIST that Teruggi was shot on the street and by a weapon of a different caliber from those used by the military.

But the story does not sit well with at least one person — David Hathaway.

"If they released Frank one day after we were arrested, why did they hold me and other foreigners for nearly a week. It makes no sense," Hathaway said.

"Perhaps he was involved in something that was unknown to us, but that is only a supposition," he added. Hathaway said persons he knew who were actively involved in left wing activities were not harmed by the military.

"My only other thought is that this was a tragic mistake. There were many of those made during the overthrow," he said.

HATHAWAY SAID Teruggi, who had been studying economics since 1971, was not actively involved in political student groups loyal to ousted Marxist President Salvador Allende.

But he said Teruggi had been working for a group translating magazines and news reports into Spanish.

"The group, the North American Information Forces, translated the news from a different point of view than the U.S. media did," he said. He added the work also involved news of "imperialistic and oppressive actions against workers throughout the world."

Hathaway said the group was not affiliated with the University of Chile, where Teruggi was a student, but it was considered a "scholarly organization."

"This was a very serious research group," Hathaway said.

Hathaway, a metal lathe operator, said he was in the country about a year and a roommate of Teruggi for about seven months.

"The Marxist and left wing literature Frank had were not unusual, many of the books had been on sale for about ten years, even before Allende took power," he said.

Hathaway said the first night he was held by the military he feared for his safety.

"The military threatened to shoot us on the spot, they contended we were extremist and snipers, but I think that they were just trying to scare us," he said.

He said he was not questioned very profoundly while a prisoner.

"All they wanted to know is who we were, what we were doing in Chile and if we had any left wing views," he said, adding the government interrogators did not try very hard to get any information from him.

Hathaway said he was surprised when he and Teruggi were separated.

"I thought he was just taken away to be questioned. I was really surprised to learn that he had not been back to our apartment after I had been released."

HATHAWAY SAID when he returned to their apartment in a suburb of Santiago, none of Teruggi's belongings had been disturbed.

"If in fact he had been released, he never returned to the apartment," Hathaway added.

Hathaway also joined several critics of the U.S. State Department for their handling of the situation in Chile.

"No one from the government contacted my family to tell them we were being held, they learned of it through the grape vine," he said.

"I have talked to other Americans, who were not arrested, who went to the embassy to seek help, but they were given the cold shoulder. The government has been very lax in this whole situation," he said.

HATHAWAY SAID Teruggi shared many Marxist views of the Allende regime, but did not totally support the government.

He also explained that Teruggi was apparently an innocent bystander during an attempted coup d'etat last June.

"Frank had just left a French class at the university and an army battalion was staging an attack on the presidential palace just down the street. He was hit in the ankle by a ricocheting bullet."

The coup failed in June, but the revolt which started Sept. 11 succeeded. Frank Teruggi's gunshot wound had not yet healed, Hathaway said.

TERUGGI'S BODY apparently laid with hundreds of others in the Santiago morgue for 12 days — unidentified. The long, agonizing wait for information about Frank Teruggi ended.

"An American friend of ours told me that was how he was certain the corpse in the morgue was Frank," Hathaway said.

"But we still don't know why."

Sewage woes

Residents charge pollution coming from Weller Creek

by STEVE BROWN

A group of Des Plaines women may try to block the Metropolitan Sanitary District (MSD) from issuing any additional sewer permits for projects along Weller Creek.

The action, which is one of the tactics being considered by the Cumberland Terrace Civic Association, results from what residents have termed a serious health problem. They contend large amounts of raw sewage are being dumped into the creek upstream in Mount Prospect and other towns.

Officials from both Des Plaines and the MSD admit that the creek, which runs from near the Barrington area to the Des Plaines River, is polluted, but contend there are no short range solutions available.

DES PLAINE'S Environmental Officer Philip Lindahl said recently he has been told a number of major projects will have to be completed before the sewage problem can be reduced.

But the women, including Shelly Cerney, 209 Washington St., Des Plaines, believe something can be done and they feel city and MSD officials are dragging their feet.

"The city and the MSD has told us that there is nothing we can do to improve the situation," she said. Mrs. Cerney said combined sewage systems in Mount Prospect allow for raw sewage to be dumped into the creek during periods of heavy rains.

"I do not see why the creek has to be that dirty. 15 years ago, the water was clean and you could even fish out of it,"

said Loralee Hinton, of 237 Washington. "We would like to see the city help remove this health problem," added Nancy Anda, of 242 Washington.

THE WOMEN said City Sanitarian Marvin Martin has helped to eliminate a rat problem also bothering persons living near the creek. They said Martin has put out rat bait and traps several times.

The creek was cited as one of the dirtiest in Illinois by the state Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) several years ago and the local residents said there is little that has been done to change the problem.

City officials said they have been told by the MSD that the problems along Weller Creek will not improve substantially until several new sewage treatment plants, including the controversial O'Hare facility, are constructed and put into operation.

The civic association is also concerned about the hazard the creek represents for local children and the possibility of flooding.

"We have lost 10 feet of our backyard," said Mrs. Oille Sloan. While the city has done some work to improve the banks of the creek, the residents said the last major channel improvements were made in 1969 and 1970 and more work needs to be done. Some work on the creek was performed more recently in Mount Prospect.

"We haven't been getting satisfactory answers to any of our questions and there seems like there should be more people concerned about this problem," Mrs. Cerney said.

Slowly, the park district is gaining missile site land for public use

WHERE MISSILES stood ready, golfers will be teeing off, if the Arlington Heights Park District is successful in acquiring the Nike Base for a regional park.

The scorecard reads: Arlington Heights Park District 13, U.S. Army 73 and undecided 52.

The above breakdown represents the acres held by the contesting parties in the struggle for control of the Arlington Heights Nike Base on Central Road. The park district hopes to shut out the Army in the future, but the fight is far from finished.

Last week the parks gained some hope in adding 52 acres to their total with the announcement by Rep. Philip M. Crane, R-Ill., that the Defense Department no longer needs that parcel of land for Navy housing. The parks still must wait 30 to 90 days for the General Services Administration to poll other federal agencies to determine if any of them want the land.

The slides have been drawn up for use of the land. On one side is the Army maintaining the missile base is necessary to defend Chicago from an enemy attack. The Army also uses the site for National Guard maneuvers. The other side comprises the park district, area homeowners, a congressman and U.S. senators.

THE ARMY FACILITY has had a checkered career. Should the parks eventually get the land, it will have served as a prison camp, an airfield, a trailer park, a missile base, an equipment depot for the Illinois National Guard and finally a golf course.

Thomas Thornton, park district director, has a six-inch-thick file, dating back 10 years, on efforts to acquire the land for a park.

"The first letter is dated Nov. 1, 1963, to U.S. Sen. Paul Douglas. We were asking about the site then. We had heard 100 acres of it was going to be declared surplus, so we included development of it in the 1964 referendum. Well, it wasn't surplus after all, so we had to change the referendum around," Thornton said of his first attempt to get part of the 137-acre site.

To Thornton, and park officials, the Nike base is an open plum in the midst of rapid urban and suburban sprawl. It is, according to him, one of the last big hand parcels the district could acquire at a minimum of monetary outlay.

"Open land is needed in this growth area. We have about 350 acres of open land for 70,000 residents and the minimum ratio is 10 acres per 1,000 people. So you can see, we're in bad shape. Even with the entire base, we'd still be well below that standard," he said.

THE PARKS SCORED their first victory in improving the ratio in August when 13 acres of the base were deeded to the district. The land, across from Northwest Community Hospital, was outside the perimeter fence of the base.

A small nine-hole golf course was planned for the site, but the district took the advice of David Gill, a golf course architect, and left the land in "passive use." The plans were scrapped in favor of waiting for the Navy land and eventually the Army acreage.

"Why a golf course? Well, it's the best possible use for the land. There is no need for more picnicking areas — it's not suitable for that anyway," Thornton said.

According to him, a golf course on the land represents the best use because: 1. Golf courses are good revenue-producers. 2. The land could be used for winter recreation. 3. Storm water basins could be incorporated into the course to alleviate flooding in the village.

"We have found golf courses to be very good revenue-producers. We checked all around the area, and we don't know of any that aren't a success," Thornton said.

THORNTON'S timetable calls for acquiring the Navy land from GSA around the first of the year, construction of a nine-hole course, followed by acquisition of the Army land and completion of a full 18-hole course with a clubhouse.

The first task is just about assured, according to persons close to land transfer. A spokesman for Rep. Crane said no other bids for the Navy land are foreseen.

The parks retained architect Gill at a cost of $5,000 to develop plans for the base. This was done to present the federal government with concrete proposals for the land; a necessary step in gaining "surplus" land.

There is another aspect the government wants to know about: what is the cost and how will it be financed?

"A very round, ballpark figure for the entire 18 holes and a clubhouse would be around $1 million," Thornton said. "We're still debating about the financing. We can have revenue or general obligation bonds. Revenue bonds would have to be paid off before money (from a golf facility) could go to other things. With G. O. bonds, the money can go around while they are being paid off. Our consultants with the National Golf Federation tell us G.O. bonds have a very good record of passing. Offhand, I can't think of any that haven't passed for a golf course."

THE ARMY IS not likely to give up the Nike base without a struggle. It has been termed "vital to the air defense of the

Race track commuter station doubles in use since opening

Use of the new commuter station at Arlington Park Race Track has doubled in the one month the depot has been open, a Chicago and North Western Ry. spokesman said yesterday.

An average of 530 passengers are now boarding commuter trains at Arlington Park, compared to about 275 people during the first week the station opened Sept. 1.

At the current passenger level, the railroad says it is projecting additionally yearly revenues in excess of $100,000.

Joseph Murren, assistant director of public affairs for the North Western, said the ridership was "larger than we had hoped for" for this time of year.

More than 300 cars are now parking in the lot adjacent to the Arlington Park station. There is room for 800 cars.

Use of the Arlington Park stop has eased slightly congestion at the Arlington Heights depot, the largest suburban commuter station in the Chicago area.

SALES OF monthly commuter passes for the Arlington Heights station dropped 103, from 3,022 to 2,899, between September and October. Monthly ticket sales dropped in Palatine from 1,767 to 1,722.

It's United Fund Week

Arlington Heights Village Pres. Jack Walsh has proclaimed Oct. 5-15 United Fund Week and urged all citizens to contribute generously to the charity program.

A goal of $75,000 has been established for this year's fund drive, which is part of the Metropolitan Crusade of Mercy.

Persons wishing to mail contributions may do so by sending their donation to P.O. Box 365, Arlington Heights.

Fun fair Saturday

The Women's Club of Our Lady of the Wayside School, 432 S. Mitchell, Arlington Heights, will sponsor a fun fair Saturday at the junior high school auditorium.

The event will be held from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. and will feature a moon walk, games, prizes and a bike raffle.

Cub Pack 135 awards

Fourteen Scouts of Cub Pack 135 recently were awarded bobcat badges and books by awards chairman Len McFarland. The scouts include: Don Vassos, John Panizza, Craig McFarland, Robert Larson, James Dalacker, Gregg Lapp, Greg Lindskog and Steven Belhomini.

Also, Rick Anderson, James Just, Andrew Oleson, Douglas Broehl, Eric Lea and Paul Robacki.

The following members became Webelos Scouts: Michael Dunavin, William Fasth and William Soper.

The pack plans to attend the Hershey and Wheeling High School football game on Oct. 19.

At Arlington Park, monthly passes jumped from 0 to 412.

The race track stop was the first new commuter station to be opened on the Chicago and North Western commuter lines since 1925, Marren said.

The depot, built by the Village of Arlington Heights at a cost of $100,000, was contemplated in the 1960 annexation agreement between Arlington Park and the village.

Over $300,000 was spent on the entire facility, with the railroad paying for all track and platform work and the race track meeting the expenses of parking and fencing.

In addition to commuters from Arlington Heights and Palatine, Arlington Park draws riders from Buffalo Grove, Long Grove, Rolling Meadows, Schaumburg, Hoffman Estates and other communities off of the railroad's main line.

Name Thomas Dooley to library board

Thomas W. Dooley, 431 S. Patton, Arlington Heights, has been named to the Arlington Heights Memorial Library's board of trustees.

He succeeds Philip D. Jones who resigned from the position due to an employment transfer.

Dooley is executive vice president of Gallery of Homes, a real estate firm.

He previously taught philosophy and business at Harper College, Xavier University in Cincinnati, Ohio and Thomas More College, Covington, Ky.

Married and the father of four children, Dooley was among six applicants for the board position.

Sisters find each other after 20-year search

by BETTY LEE

"I am looking for my sister, Carline Dohm," Florence Korf wrote Minnesota state officials nearly 20 years ago. "She was adopted when she was four years old, back in 1917."

It has been 56 years since Mrs. Korf of 507 W. Miner, Arlington Heights had last seen her little sister, Carline. It was only 20 years ago when she began a letter campaign searching for her. Despite the inquiries made to state and county officials, Carline was never found.

But recently the two sisters found each other and spent two days talking about what had happened during those years. They found they both had something in common: They were both looking for each other.

THERE WERE four Dohm sisters, all living with their mother back in the early 1900's in Winona, Minn., a small town by the river coast of the Mississippi. When Mrs. Korf was 12 years old, she and her sisters were separated.

Ruth, the oldest one, went to live with her grandmother. Mrs. Korf and another sister, Evelyn, were placed in a foster home. And the youngest, Carline, was adopted by a couple living in LaCrosse, Wis.

"After a few years we were reunited with our mother," said Mrs. Korf, now 70. "Everyone was back but Carline. Mother felt pretty bad about getting everyone back but that one."

Mrs. Korf moved to the Chicago area when she was married. The distance away from her family caused her to think of her sister more. "I wanted to see her so bad," she said. "I knew she was around somewhere."

SHE SENT letters to state and private agencies and waited for answers that would give a clue to the whereabouts of Carline. But all her letters were ignored.

A letter sent two years ago did result in a reply. Officials told her that there were no records available, and if there were, they said they were reluctant to release information on adopted children.

"Perhaps they think it would mess up their lives," said Mrs. Korf. "I never thought I could find her. Even anyone told me there were no records."

Meanwhile, Carline, or rather Dorothy, the name that was given to her when she was adopted, found traces of her real identity. "I had an inkling that I was adopted or something like that," said Dorothy, who is now Mrs. Eugene Arentz of Owatonna, Wis. "But I never paid too much attention to it until eight or nine years ago. One relative said I had sisters and brothers but didn't know their names."

MRS. ARENTZ also began a letter campaign in search for her sisters and brothers. "It was a weird experience," she said. "I was brought up alone. I've always wanted to go to Chicago. I had the feeling that there was someone there I knew but I didn't know a soul."

She received one lead that resulted in a telephone call to the Korf residence. "When she called I told her she was looking at the wrong place," said Mrs. Korf. "I told her I didn't have a sister by that name. But then I asked her where she was calling from. And then I knew she was Carline. I told her I had a sister named Carline and she said, 'Is that my name?'"

The sisters talked over the phone for hours. "It was like I have never been away from her," said Mrs. Arentz. "It didn't seem strange at all. There were no tears."

THE ARENTZ family came to Arlington Heights last month to see Mrs. Korf and her family. When the two sisters met, they knew they were related. "We looked alike and my kids and her kids looked alike. There was a resemblance," Mrs. Arentz said.

It's a perfect story, they said. "People don't see each other for a long time but they know where they are," said Mrs. Korf. Both are writing letters to fill each other in on what they did during those 56 years. They plan to see each other often.

During the visits, everyone will call Mrs. Arentz by the name she grew up with — Dorothy. "I still call her Carline," said Mrs. Korf. "I'll always call her Carline."

What does Mrs. Arentz think of that? "Carline LaVerne," she said, "is a nice name."

Arlington High seeks to shut streets to cars

Arlington High School officials have requested that Ridge and Walnut streets be closed to traffic near the school during the hours that students are attending classes.

Ridge runs between Arlington High School and Olympic Park where students use the swimming pool and tennis courts. Walnut runs on the east side of the school building.

Arlington High School Principal Bruno Waara said yesterday that because of the planned grade crossing at Walnut he will probably drop his request that that street be closed.

He said he was asking to have Ridge closed at Euclid and at Vine during school hours "primarily as a safety factor but also to stop some noise disruption."

Athletic practice fields for the school also are located across Ridge near Olympic Park.

The matter has been referred to the village board's public health and safety committee, scheduled to meet at 8 p.m. today at the Municipal Building, 33 S. Arlington Heights Rd.

ANOTHER consideration is the location of Ridge School north of the high school between Kaspar and Fernandez avenues.

Much of the Ridge School traffic now uses Ridge and Vine streets. If Ridge were to be closed at Vine, cars wanting to head south probably would be directed north to Elm Street and then one block east to Walnut.

A grade crossing across the railroad tracks and Northwest Highway at Walnut has been planned for years.

Completion of the crossing has been delayed by right-of-way condemnation proceedings in court.

Village Mgr. L. A. Hanson said he would be opposed to the closing of Walnut Street because of the grade crossing plans. Temporary barricades on Ridge probably could be put up without too much disruption, he said.

St. James Oktoberfest

St. James Church, Arlington Heights, will hold its annual fall fund-raising event, "Oktoberfest," on Oct. 19 at the parish center, 800 Arlington Heights Rd. "Oktoberfest" will start at 8:30 p.m. with an authentic German band and traditional Bavarian food including bratwurst and hackepeter sandwiches. For reservations and tickets, call 253-8945.

'Singing Witnesses' perform

"The Singing Witnesses," a group of eight men from Wisconsin, will perform at two services Sunday at St. John United Church of Christ, 308 N. Evergreen Ave., Arlington Heights.

The first service will be at 9:15 a.m. and the second at 10:45 a.m. During the service, each of the men will deliver a short sermon.

432 condo units under construction

A 432-unit condominium project between New and Old Wilke Roads near Algonquin Road in Arlington Heights has been started by Charles G. Matthies Inc.

The 30-acre site will be built with four six-story buildings and 29 two-story buildings clustered around a central retention lake. All the condominium units will be two-bedroom models and are expected to be priced at about $40,000.

The development site originally was owned by Miller Builders, developers of Surrey Ridge West subdivision. But it was sold when Miller divested itself of all its unbuilt Arlington Heights properties.

Hoffman Estates gives OK to 4,472-unit Westbury

Over the strenuous objections of one trustee, the proposed development plan for Westbury was approved by the Hoffman Estates village board last night.

Trustee Diane Jensen termed the plan for 4,472 residential units on 497 acres "terrible," and said the board was not voting on the plan but on who would pay the cost of multiple lawsuits focusing on it.

The site, along both sides of Palatine Road in Palatine Township, is to include 400 single-family homes; 4,000 apartments, townhouses and condominiums, and two commercial areas.

The board voted only after an hour-long executive session in which last-minute negotiations were concluded. Although the village has been negotiating just slightly more than a year with Meridian Housing Corp., the planned developer, bargaining continued until 10:30 p.m. last night.

The final points to be decided were parking and fence screening for the mid-rise apartment area. The village wanted 2½ parking spaces per housing unit. Meridian had agreed to provide two. The final settlement provides 2½.

HOFFMAN ESTATES agreed to grant unspecified variations to its fence ordinance provision for screening between commercial areas and apartment sections. Village Atty. Edward Hofert noted Meridian is providing more open space between the two types of development than the fence ordinance requires.

In opposing the Westbury project, Mrs. Jensen related the history of the property, formerly known as Howle-in-the-Hills, describing it as "riddled with hindsight, but not too much foresight." She noted there are arguments on both sides of the proposal, but pointed out her objections. The marshy land conditions will be expensive to correct, and "when it comes to money, developers don't like to spend it," she said. She noted the property covers only 75 acres more than Moon Lake Village subdivision, but will house residents equal in number to half the current population of Hoffman Estates.

Mid-rise structures will be about 500 feet from the Winston Knolls single-family home subdivision, she said. Arguments that the "buyer should beware," either in the project or near it, are "nothing but a copout," she concluded.

Trustee Melvin Timmons, who lives in Winston Knolls, said he shares some of Mrs. Jensen's feelings, but would accept committee recommendations. Only Mrs. Jensen voted against the plan.

Hofert is to report agreement to the plan by the village before Chief U.S. District Court Judge Edwin Robson at 2 p.m. today. The settlement will not be final until Meridian deposits the $5.6 million purchase price for the property and sufficient funds to finance other provisions of the settlement. Preparation of legal documents may take 30 days, Hofert has said.

Settlement of the zoning in Meridian's plan brings to an end lawsuits totaling roughly $1.5 million against the village over its involvement in obtaining special assessments to finance public improvements on the property.

STRATEGY OF THE rook, or castle, is explained by Jude Acers, chess master, to Shawn Dykas, a student of Aldrin School, Schaumburg. Acers visited students Friday to encourage their interest in the game of thinkers. He will play simultaneous games with all challengers for each of six sets of games, scheduled for 3 and 7 p.m. today, tomorrow and Thursday in the grand court of Woodfield Mall, Schaumburg.

State Rep. Schlickman tells plans to seek sixth term

by AL MESSERSCHMIDT

State Rep. Eugene Schlickman will run again.

Schlickman, R-Arlington Heights, announced yesterday he will seek a sixth term to "work for an open, truly representative house . . . to continue to speak out where others hesitate."

The Arlington Heights attorney was optimistic in his fourth district candidacy announcement, despite personal setbacks in the spring General Assembly session. "I am proud of the battles I have fought and won, I am proud of the setbacks for they represent real challenges to the heavy handed, low dealing of a few who seem to think that advancing their own political ambitions comes before doing the job for which they were elected."

Schlickman was unsuccessful last spring in an attempt to block the election of Rep. W. Robert Blair as House Speaker. Since then, the two have battled over legislation and political appointments. Blair recently dumped Schlickman as chairman of the legislative advisory commission to the Northeast Illinois Planning Commission.

MAINE TOWNSHIP Committeeman Floyd Fulle, Wheeling Township Committeeman Richard Cowen and State Sen. John Nimrod supported his candidacy, Schlickman said.

Nimrod and Arlington Heights Mayor Jack Walsh attended the press conference yesterday in Des Plaines.

Schlickman, known for controversial support of parochialism, zoning reform and regional planning, said he will work to secure homeowner protection against shoddy home construction, for land-use planning, regional mass transit, elimination of sales tax on drugs and medicine, and legislative and election reform.

"I will not accept contributions exceeding $100 from any source, no contributions from any corporation or special interest groups," he said. "All contributions must come from individuals."

Schlickman said he will open his 1974 campaign records to the press.

Schlickman said he plans to play a vital part in choosing a speaker for the House in the spring. "I can see myself going further than I did this time," he said.

Adventures of your Garbageman

Please Note Our NEW ADDRESS

After a number of years at 8 South Dunton, we've outgrown our space. So, as of last week, we moved to a new location at:

110 S. Dryden Place

That's just south of Arlington Market, and a little north of Northwest Highway, on the curve in the road.

Our new address is printed on our current bills (which are now in the mails). However, if you like to pay your garbage bill in person, you might wish to tear out this ad as a record of our new address.

We had hoped to find suitable space in a more central location, but it was not to be.

Come and see us in our new home. As always, we'll be happy to hear complaints or compliments.

Stubing a 'Champion'

John Stubing, 206 S. Hernandez, Arlington Heights, was recently inducted into the Catholic Youth Organization's Club of Champions.

Stubing will be formally inducted at the annual Catholic Youth Organization-Knights of Columbus Appreciation dinner on Oct. 17 at the Lake Shore Club, according to Rev. Raymond A. Pavis, archdiocesan director of youth activities.

A member of the Knights of Columbus for 30 years, Stubing is affiliated with the Daniel O'Connell Council. He is a member of Our Lady of the Wayside Parish in Arlington Heights.

weighed by library

Librarians at the Arlington Heights Memorial Library soon may be able to determine overdue books or the availability of a book in another library instantly by means of a computer system.

Officials of several libraries belonging to the North Suburban Library System, including Frank Dempsey, executive librarian of the Arlington Heights library, have begun a feasibility study on purchasing or leasing a computer system from the Computer Library Services Inc.

"It will better the library service, enabling us to tell immediately when a book is due or have overdue notices printed out right away," said Dempsey. "But this is strictly in the discussion stage."

Because of the cost of the computer, an estimate of $53,000, area libraries are considering sharing the use of the computer and sharing the costs and expenses.

Libraries participating in the study include Arlington Heights, Glenview, Northbrook, Skokie and Libertyville.

If the libraries decide to adopt the computer system, operations will probably begin during the next fiscal year (1974-75), said Dempsey.

Committee against flooding slates gripe session tonight

The Citizens Action Committee Against Flooding has scheduled what committee chairman Frank Palmatier termed "a gripe session" tonight with Stanley Consultants, the engineering firm hired to evaluate the village's flood control program.

Palmatier said he has called the meeting in order for committee members to raise questions they may have about the $14 million flood control program outlined by R. J. Peterson & Associates after the widespread flooding Aug. 25, 1972.

A report by Stanley Consultants evaluating the Peterson proposals is expected early in December. The Peterson report cost $18,000 and the village board has authorized the spending of an additional $18,000 for Stanley Consultants' work.

Members of the committee pressed for a second engineering evaluation in order to bolster the flood control plans before they are presented to the voters in a bond issue referendum.

Palmatier said he hopes that committee members who have specific doubts or questions about the Peterson program will raise them at tonight's session.

10-year fight to claim Nike lands

Chicago metropolitan area" by base commanders.

Questions are now being raised whether the base and armaments it commands would be effective in case of a missile attack. Its use as a National Guard depot is also coming under scrutiny from area legislators.

According to a Crane spokesman, the congressman has been making "inquiries" about the actual use of the base. He went this spring with homeowners near the base and said he "will go to bat" for a park on the site.

Sen. Adlai Stevenson III has also taken up the park district banner to acquire the land. He toured the base in May and met with residents and park officials prior to the government's decision to declare the first 13 acres surplus.

A spokesman for the senator said, "We are looking into the matter to see if the Army's claims of necessity are justified."

AMONG THE questions to be answered are whether the facility with its National Guard component could be moved to Ft. Sheridan and whether the base provides adequate protection in case of an enemy attack.

The spokesman continued, "The senator has been a long-time supporter of regional park in the area . . . This ties in with the need for open land. In terms of open land in ratio to population, this is the most park-starved area in the nation. It is also part of an overall effort to eliminate under-utilized federal property."

Thornton placed the many correspondences back in the file and said, "We've put out $5,000 for the preliminary plans. I know we're sticking our neck out, but heck, we have to show we're serious. It's been a long, long time — 10 years. A lot of people have been working on this and now it looks like it's finally coming around."
